'Scare' tapes reported

©New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The Federal Bureau of Investigation mailed what some agents considered an "unsavory" tape recording made from an electronic room bug to Coretta King to "frighten" her husband, the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., into halting his criticism of the bureau, according to a former high official of the agency.

The mailing of the tape recording to Mrs. King was part of nearly a decade of "harassment" of the late civil rights leader by the bureau, several former agents and officials say. One retired agent, Arthur Murtagh, who was attached to the FBI's Atlanta field office, said the moves against King were second in size "only to the way they went after Jimmy Hoffa."

Yet, there was never a criminal prosecution of King and these former FBI men say, there was a "dubious" national security rationale for what they said were thousands of hours of electronic and physical surveillance. These sources believe that the alleged harassment of King should be investigated by the Congressional committees on intelligence. Several have written to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

The sending to a private citizen of a tape recording obtained by a national security electronic surveillance is a violation of FBI regulations and was a potential violation of the Federal Communications Act and the Federal Criminal Code.

The surveillance of King was briefly noted last year in a report by then Attorney General William B. Saxbe and FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley on the bureau's counterintelligence program, or Cointelpro. The report said the Cointelpro techniques included "investigating the love life of a group leader for dissemination to the press." Justice Department officials later identified the group leader as King.

A spokesman for the bureau said it had "no comment" on the alleged harassment of King.

The former FBI official who brought the matter to the attention of the New York Times asked to remain anonymous in the expectation that he might be called to testify in investigations of the bureau.

He said that in late 1964, after King had criticized the FBI for having assigned agents with Southern backgrounds to handle civil rights cases, the late director, J. Edgar Hoover, ordered William C. Sullivan, then in charge of the bureau's counterintelligence operations, to arrange to send a copy of a tape recording secretly to Mrs. King in such a manner that it could not be traced to the FBI.

The source said that a copy of a tape recording was made by the bureau's laboratory. It was wrapped in a small, plain, unmarked package with no return address, and delivered to Sullivan's office, the source said, and it had been addressed to Mrs. Coretta King, Atlanta, Ga.

Arabs' oil output nosedives

©New York Times Service

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Saudi Arabian oil production in February averaged 6.5 million barrels daily, declining to the same level as reached in late 1972, the Middle East Economic Survey reported here Saturday.

The decline in Saudi production reflects the drop in demand for oil as a result of recession in the industrial countries and consumer resistance to higher oil prices imposed during 1973 and last year. It does not result from any production restriction by the Saudi Arabia government.

The allowable level of production for oil companies in Saudi Arabia is currently 8.5 million barrels daily. Output below that level during the first two months of this year can be made up during the rest of the year if the demand increases. The average output in January was 7.6 million barrels a day.

When Saudi production reached 6.5 million barrels a day in late 1972, the government's revenue was about $2.25 a barrel. Now, with the same production, the government revenue is $10.12.

As a result, Saudi Arabia will earn well over $22 billion this year at the February rate of production, and the decline in demand has not produced any financial pressure on Saudi Arabia to cut her price.

'Whopping' pay hike OK'd

By BILL LAZARUS
Times-News Capitol Bureau

BOISE — The Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee has approved a whopping 31.6 per cent personnel budget increase for its budget analysis staff.

This year the personnel budget for the staff of seven is $104,700. For fiscal 1976 the committee has presented an appropriations bill which would raise the budget to $137,800 without adding any new, permanent staff members.

But, legislation fiscal officer John Andreason, who directs the budget analysis, asserts that in this case "percentages don't mean a damn."

Any new increase in the committee's expenditures will show up big in its small budget, Andreason maintains. He says the addition of new interns and summer help at a cost of $5,000 plus large but normal salary increases for two new employes who started this year are major factors in boosting personnel costs for the staff.

Even discounting money for the new help, however, salary increases for the core staff of seven would be up nearly 26 per cent. And, there is some question whether the $5,000 for new help should not be counted in figuring the salary increases.

Assassination link eyed

©New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The Rockefeller commission on the Central Intelligence Agency is looking into allegations that the CIA was somehow involved in the assassination of President Kennedy in 1963, according to informed sources close to its investigation.

One focus of the commission's inquiry, the sources said, is the recent assertion of a group headed by Dick Gregory, the comedian and civil rights activist, that E. Howard Hunt Jr. was seized by the Dallas police near the Kennedy assassination site within minutes of the shooting.

Hunt, convicted two years ago of conspiring to carry out the Watergate bugging plot, was a clandestine political officer for the CIA at the time President Kennedy was murdered.

The Gregory group's charge is founded on photographs published last year in underground newspapers and elsewhere purporting to show Hunt and Frank A. Sturgis, another of the convicted Watergate burglars, being led by the police away from a grassy knoll across from the Texas school book depository building.

Hunt, in testimony before the Rockefeller commission, reportedly denied that he was in Dallas at the time of the assassination or that he knew Sturgis then.

Sturgis reportedly was employed by the CIA as an operative in the Miami area around the time of the agency-inspired Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba in 1961.

The school book depository was identified in the final report of the Warren Commission, which investigated the Kennedy assassination, as the location from which Lee Harvey Oswald fired the shots that killed President Kennedy and wounded John B. Connally, then governor of Texas, as they passed by in a motorcade.

Gooding group wants mayor out

By CRICKET BIRD
Times-News writer

GOODING — A movement to oust Mayor Leo Rice has surfaced in Gooding.

The ouster attempt is a petition drive which will demand either the 72-year-old mayor's recall or his resignation.

A group of local women is circulating the petitions, which now call for Rice's recall, but may be changed to demand his resignation.

Some signatures from Gooding residents have already been obtained.

On a recall move, the petitions must be signed by 20 per cent of the number of persons registered to vote in the last general city election. Persons signing the petition must be registered voters.

City clerk George Silva Saturday refused to release information for quotation regarding the number of signatures needed.

One source said about 200 signatures would be required to call a recall vote.

Rice, who previously served three terms as mayor in the 1950s, was elected to the top city post in November 1973.

The reason cited on the petition demanding the mayor's recall reads "We feel that he has not run the city of Gooding in the best interest of the citizens of the city, and that several departments have not been able to function since he took office in the manner they should."

Complaints against the mayor range from personal gripes to charges that he "mismanages people." The man added he felt there were many things wrong with the way Rice was running the city.

"If the people are aware of what's going on, they deserve him," the man said.

Reached at his home Saturday, Mayor Rice didn't appear to take the possibility of recall too seriously.

"They've voted me in several times," he said. He said he believed a controversy over a subdivision was the motive for the recall talk.

Another city employe, who also declined to be identified, said there was deep-seated dissatisfaction in the town with Rice's performance as mayor.

Gem panel ups staff wages 31.6%

Record's from the governor's budget division show that the committee received a $1,834 increase for temporary help last summer, indicating that the money for help next summer should not be discounted as a new expense.

But Andreason says help was not hired last summer and the money was used for meeting other personal budget needs.

In any case, the proposed 31.6 per cent personnel budget boast could be explosive for the committee which is responsible for drawing up appropriations bills. Sen. Richard S. High, Twin Falls, and Rep. W. Roberts, R-Buhl, co-chairman of the committee.

Following five weeks of dispute the legislature approved a 3.5 per cent cost-of-living salary increase for state employees plus reallocations. Reallocations, mandated by Idaho law, are meant to bring state employees salaries in the line with salaries of employees in similar occupations in private industry.

Altogether, the 3.5 per cent. cost of living increase, reallocations, fringe benefits and "step" increases given for longevity at the job would give state employees on the average around 14 per cent salary increases, according to Republican legislators.

Even so, the increases approved by the legislature are far below the increases proposed by Gov. Cecil D. Andrus and have caused bitterness among many state employees.

That bitterness could be directed at members of the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee, especially if the state employees believed the committee had granted unjust increases to its own staff.

But, according to Andreason, the increases are normal, not unjust. In fact, he says, compared with other states, the committe's staff is underpaid.

Andreason says his staff members are tied to the same salary schedule which employees of the governor's budget division are tied to. Jobs which are similar the committee and the division should be paid about the same, he says.

In line with the salary schedule, Andreason says his two employees hired this year will receive double step increases. Each step increase boosts an employees salary five per cent. According to Andreason, it is common to give two step increases in a year to new and comparatively lowly paid employees.

Also, six out of seven members of the committee's staff are up for full reallocations this year. Whereas the governor's budget division has been reallocated each year recently. "We haven't had a reallocation for three years" Andreason says.

The average full reallocation is a 10 per cent salary increase.

Given cost-of-living increases, reallocations, step increases and fringe benefit increases, the committee's total personel costs could be expected to be nearly 21 per cent higher next year, not 31 per cent higher.

With five employees receiving a single five per cent step increase and two employees receiving a double, ten per cent step increase, personnel costs in this area should go up 8.6 per cent.

Then, a 10 per cent reallocation for six out of seven committee staff members would: an overall 8.6 per cent reallocations increase.

Adding in an automatic 3.5 per cent cost-of-living increase, the total personnel costs would rise to 18.6 per cent. Fringe benefits, which would go up 2.3 per cent with these other increases, would bring the estimated personnel cost increase to 20.9 per cent.

That's far below the actual 31 per cent personnel cost increase for the budget analysis staff. And it still would be well below the near 26 per cent personnel cost increase which discounts $5,000 for summer help and new interns.

But, according to High, the committee's "affirmative action" program to equalize salaries between men and women employees also needs to be considered, even with the 31.6 per cent personnel budget boost. This need will not be completely met, he says.

Andreason says, the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee has not been easy on the staff's budget.

He says the committee denied a request for two new analysts for the staff, even though his staff is only one third the size of the governors budget division staff.

And, while the staff puts in a great deal of overtime, compensation is small compared to similar committee staff salaries in other states, Andreason maintains.

He points to a document showing out of 18 western states only Oklahoma pays its legislative fiscal officer less then the $19,428 Idaho pays.

STARRING in the CSI film, "The Great Submarine Sandwich Robbery" are Dave Gill, left, made up as portly individual, and Liz Nutting, who reveals the missing "submarine" in violin case. The film history class is making a three-minute movie.

CSI film history class making own color movies

TWIN FALLS — They're making movies on the College of Southern Idaho campus.

The film history class at CSI is putting theory into practice with the production of its own 16mm color film, "The Great Submarine Sandwich Robbery."

The production is student written, directed and acted and is a take-off on Edwin S. Porter's silent classic of 1903 "The Great Train Robbery."

Shooting began Friday and will continue through the coming week at various locations around Twin Falls including the CSI campus.

When completed the film will be a three-minute show combining silent film technique with a contemporary comic vision. Class members say it will be rated "G."

Class instructor Randall Morgan, cinematographer and editor for National Geographic Society and Standford University, will present the final version of the film on the Rosemary Hailey Cameo Show April 3 on KMVT, local television station.

Morgan said the film project was made possible through a $100 production grant from Xerox Corp. Regional representative of Xerox, Christopher Brewer, is a class member.

The film was written by Brewer and Eugene Smith and is directed by Brewer and Mark Rohlfing. Liz Nutting and Dave Gill and Dave Allred are the actors, but the real hero, says Morgan, is a submarine sandwich.

Production sketches were done by Ellery Summer. Jim Walker is camera assistant and production assistants are Dan Wachsterrer, Dave Ullman and Ron Fissl. Randall Morgan is cameraman and editor.

Andrus presses for big spending

Gov. Andrus apparently has a plan. His plan may succeed.

He apparently intends to use his veto, delaying tactics, a solid block vote by Democratic legislators and the support of crossover Republicans to push through much of his program.

If he succeeds it will mean a big spending instead of tax relief.

Recently Andrus has vetoed two tax relief bills, and then used a tight Democratic block to sustain his vetoes. One bill would have given a tax rebate of $5 for every member of a taxpayer's family. Another would have given an additional rebate of one-tenth of last year's taxes.

Now Andrus' lieutenants are suggesting the governor will begin vetoing appropriations bills in order to force increasef spending for state salaries.

One of the sore points is the Republican majority's decision to give state employees an average salary and fringe-benefit increase of 11 per cent, instead of the 15 per cent sought by the governor.

The Republicans wisely have decided to hold the average pay increase to the level of inflation instead of giving raises. It is difficult to justify the governor's desire to raise the real income levels of state employees while the taxpayers pay for the bureaucracy have face declines in real buying power.

Additionally, Andrus wants the Republicans to charge its estimate of the money coming in to the state this year and next year in order to justify spending more for employee salaries and his pet highway construction program.

To date enough Republicans have gone along to pass many of the governor's suggestions. But the time has come for those Republicans and Democrats who hope to hold state spending to reasonable levels to exert themselves.

There is no reason for Idaho to join the ranks of the big spenders, particularly in a year which promises economic setbacks for this agriculturally oriented state.

This is a year to hold the spending line, not to step over it.

ERA: push needed

Christian Science Monitor

The Illinois Senate's postponement of a vote to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment this week underscores how the drive for passage has stalled.

Only four more states must ratify the amendment, which declares that "equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex."

But at least two of the 34 states that have ratified the amendment now want to rescind their action. And the amendment's backers now think that, though 1975 has been officially declared International Women's Year, it may not be the year for final ERA passage.

Resistance to passage has some new as well as familiar roots. In strictly legal terms, it is argued that such an amendment is not necessary. Current legislation such as the Equal Pay Act of 1963 attacks sex discrimination. The Supreme Court recently has refused to uphold statutes or practices that give men privileges not afforded women, suggesting that the high court is already moving toward a fuller recognition of women's rights.

The resistance in the ERA's homestretch is also due to nonlegal causes. The recession, the recent period of social unrest on the campuses, the contention in cities over racial integration, the surge in divorces — indeed a large conflux of social and economic events — have left many citizens perplexed at the pace of change. And, however unfairly, the amendment is at least momentarily caught in the reaction against events which have altered familiar community, job and family patterns.

A concerted effort by President Ford to join Mrs. Ford in urging passage of the amendment, could help overcome resistance as shown this week by the Illinois Legislature. The measure could be passed this year.

However, it may be more likely that 1976 — still well short of the 1979 deadline — will be the year for ERA passage. It will be a presidential election year and the bicentennial year — a compelling combination of the drive of elected officials to accomplish things politically and the renewed awareness of the broader need for equal rights which led to the nation's founding

Patch up ship of state, or watch it sink

WASHINGTON — William E. Simon, secretary of the Treasury, has the most cheerful executive office in Washington.

In winter an open fire blazes away beneath a portrait of Hamilton. In spring and summer, the big windows open onto a fine view of the White House. Bright draperies and colorful furnishings lift the spirit. But these days, sad to say, you will not find a more pessimistic place in town.

"The government is out of control." That is Simon's terse appraisal of the fiscal situation the Treasury confronts. The next few months are critical. If Congress exhibits a sense of restraint, the crisis may be surmounted. But if Congress orders massive new spending programs, the higher deficits "would erode the very foundations of our economy and eventually lead us to social ruin."

From this possibility of "social ruin" Simon does not exclude the prospect of literal revolution. He foresees a kind of tip point, at which a free society no longer can survive. If present trends continue, government will act as a leech upon the body politic, sucking away its life-sustaining blood. Staggering under unmanageable debt, the economy finally will break down all together. Beyond that point, Simon's prophesies falter: He does not know who will pick up the pieces, or how.

These are grim visions. It should be emphasized that many reputable economists do not accept them. An entire school of thought insists that Simon is too timid, too conservative, too fearful of imaginary disasters. The current newsletter of Americans for Democratic Action, for example, says "the administration would be well advised to stop worrying so much about the size of the deficit." George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, is demanding greater tax rebates and larger social spending.

In my own view, for whatever it may be worth, Simon's warnings carry the bell-like ring of truth. The crucial figures have to do with the impact of federal borrowing upon the total capital market. In the current calendar year, the Treasury will be coming into the market for at least $70 billion in net new financing. Federally sponsored agencies may account for another $10 billion. As Simon recently told the House Ways and Means Committee, "This is an enormous sum."

To that enormous sum must be added the debt requirements of state and local governments, and of the entire private sector. If total government borrowing demands 80 per cent of the capital market, only 20 per cent remains for everything else. Some sectors, says Simon, will get crowded out — and the first of these may be housing. Yet a recovery of the housing industry is vital.

Simon makes certain assumptions as he looks to the future. He assumes that payments to individuals will grow in real terms at an annual rate of 8.8 per cent. He assumes a 4 per cent real increase in defense spending. He projects an increase in other budget outlays of 2.5 per cent. These are highly conservative assumptions. This is where they would take us:

The deficit for fiscal '76 would come to $63.6 billion, the deficit for fiscal '77 to $57.7 billion. The next three years would see deficits averaging [illegible] billion. In a span of just six years, the cumulative federal deficit would amount to $357.6 billion.

Simon's critics are fond of demanding that the secretary keep things in perspective. The ADA newsletter points out that in 1959, under Eisenhower, the nation saw a deficit of $12.9 billion, about 2.7 per cent of the Gross National Product. This year's deficit of $35 billion is only 2.4 per cent. What's to worry about?

Simon responds by noting that the deficit of 1959 was followed by a surplus in 1960, just as the alarming deficit of 1968 was followed by a surplus in 1969. No such surpluses are now in sight. On the contrary, under the best of circumstances that may be realistically foreseen, we may expect recurring mountainous deficits for years to come.

These are seas of red ink. Either we patch up the ship of state, says Simon, or one of these days we sink.

Long-term US economic trends need attention

© Chicago Daily News

PETER LISAGOR

WASHINGTON — Despite Congressional plans to prime the economic pump quickly, President Ford is still being cautioned against doing too much too soon.

The fear of rekindled inflation, resurgent interest rates, and a depreciated dollar still trouble economic analysts in whom Ford has confidence.

They favor "short-term medicine" of a tax cut stimulus but warn against dealing with the recession in a way as to aggravate what they consider to be long-term problems of the U.S. economy, including a decline in profits and increased reliance on debt.

"We can solve the recession by pouring out money," one analyst says, "but it would be short-sighted if we neglect the longer-term trends."

The U.S. dollar has depreciated [illegible] per cent in relation to other currencies since last September, according to the analysts. They display concern that oil-producing countries might insist upon still-higher prices for oil as a consequence of the depreciated dollar. Declining interest rates also have weakened the dollar, they note.

A major source of concern is the prospect of a far greater fiscal 1976 deficit than the $52 billion projected by the President's budget. For example, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns is known to believe that the deficit will likely exceed $100 billion, with an accompanying threat of re-igniting the fires of inflation.

Although the analysts decline to forecast when the slumping economy will "bottom out" — the estimates range from April to December this year — they maintain that, as one has put it, "signs of improvement, inconclusive as yet, have begun to appear."

The concede that unemployment continues to rise, but contend that a groundwork for recovery is being laid in a marked decline in interest rates, a substantial increase in savings and loan deposits, a hike in new mortgage commitments, new housing starts, and the liquidation of inventories, with sales holding up moderately well.

The House has voted — and the Senate is expected to follow suit — a joint resolution declaring it the sense of the Congress that the Federal Reserve Board permit the money supply to grow fast enough the first half of thiss year to lower long-term interest rates.

Burns is said to share in the "aspiration" expressed by the resolution but apparently believes his restrained view of the money supply to be the correct one. The Fed chairman has argued that the basic fact is not the amount of money available but the willingness to use it, and this rate of turnover or velocity strongly depends upon public confidence in the economy. He has been under steady fire for his position.

The Fed has been monitoring a few major corporations reportedly in financial trouble, as well as a larger number of banks, and has contingency plans for assisting them. It is reportedly Burns' view that, if circumstances warrant it, Congress may be called upon to create a Reconstruction Finance Corporation, an idea first advanced by President Herbert Hoover to help bail out firms in the Great Depression.

Burns is understood to feel that the time is not ripe for an RFC. He apparently believes that the banks would be inclined to dump on an RFC all of their dubious loans. He has not foreclosed the possibility, however, that an RFC might have to be put in place to rescue some firms.

Hussein: Personal interest in issue

New York Times Service

C. L. SULZBERGER

AMMAN, Jordan — King Hussein of Jordan is personally more involved with the question of Arab-Israeli peace than any other Arab chief of state for the simple reason, as he puts it, that four generations of his family have been linked directly to Jerusalem.

His great-grandfather is buried there and his grandfather was slain there by an assassin. Hussein himself was for long generally acknowledged to be the leader in charge of Palestinian Arab efforts to regain lands lost to Israel in 1967.

All that was changed by the Arab summit meeting in Rabat last autumn that formally assigned responsibility for recovering such territory to the Palestine Liberation Organization (P.L.O.) of Yasir Arafat. "Now for Jordan," says Hussein, "there is no longer a direct role. And in the international arena we stand behind P.L.O. claims.

"We are committed to the Rabat decision and we won't move from it unless conditions change radically. Of course, we are keeping our bridges to the occupied West Bank open to help support our brothers there. But we can't negotiate on behalf of the P.L.O. Israel wouldn't accept that. After all, why shouldn't it negotiate directly with the P.L.O.?"

Because of this changed political status one can detect hints of new diplomatic attitudes here. A Soviet delegation is visiting Jordan this month — "The first we have ever had despite years of diplomatic relations," Hussein says, adding: "We don't know the reason" for Moscow's interest. He also says "I have no reason not to talk with Arafat" although "at this stage" no problem requires such a meeting. The two men were formerly open enemies.

The king insists Jordan now has "extremely good relations" with all Arab states. And he places great hopes in new negotiations as Secretary Kissinger returns to the Middle East. Great hopes, but one could scarcely say equal confidence. For Hussein, this month marks a crucial frontier in history, but no one can be certain what that time frontier delimits.

"The big thing," he says, "is to regain a momentum toward peace. Otherwise the situation could deteriorate and lead to another disaster." He has high regard for Kissinger's negotiating talents and doesn't think (as do some other Arabs) that Egypt has any interest in seeking a separate accord with Israel.

For him, the situation seems to boil down simply to Israel's readiness to accept a return to its 1967 borders (before the Six-Day War) and face the question — territory or peace? "It is hard for Israel to choose," he concedes, "but that is the critical issue."

Nevertheless, Hussein has doubts on which turning Israel will take. He says: "If, in the immediate future, Israel changes its basic line, there is ultimately great hope. But it now looks as if they are working above all to create a military machine the like of which has never before existed in this part of the world.

"And they are doing this at the expense of their economic development, their social welfare, their progress. This makes me feel they may again stress the military approach. And that must lead again to war.

"If Israel continues along such lines it must obviously lose world support. And many people suspect they are seeking to delay progress on the assumption that next year you will have U.S. elections and the situation can be frozen.

"But this is a serious mistake. We must have progress toward peace — or we will have a more serious war than ever before. You can't have a no-war-no-peace situation that doesn't eventually wind up in war. I only hope that the Arab-Israeli and world energy problems won't be connected with each other at any critical point."

The king, a short, compact man with deep voice and notable courtesy, is especially concerned with Jerusalem and the return of that city's eastern sector (containing Islamic holy places) to Arab sovereignty. Indeed, this ticklish subject — Israel swears it will never again permit the city's partition — is emerging as perhaps the final crux.

Hussein is today a voice offstage as compared with his position prior to last autumn. But he is intensely concerned with the entire complex of issues embracing the geographical area of Palestine and its Israeli and Arab components. Therefore, he has a particular background of expertise and one cannot say that, as Kissinger returns to these parts, the king's views glow with excess optimism.

Airlines possess ultimate threat to patron

ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — The airlines are going back into the discount business.

Many of them are advertising special rates if you travel on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, buy your ticket a week in advance and stay where you're going for not less than seven days or more than 30.

There is something wrong about this. Why should the airlines tell you how long you have to stay in one place in order to get a discount? If we let them get away with this there is no telling what they'll demand of airline passengers next.

"I want to go to Los Angeles."

"Could you tell us the nature of your trip?"

"What business is that of yours?"

"If we consider it a good reason, we can give you 25 per cent off on your ticket."

"What's a good reason?"

"That's for us to decide. We have a right to know what you plan to do in Los Angeles if we're going to make it cheaper for you to fly there."

"I'm going cross-country skiing on Wilshire Boulevard."

"No jokes, please. Airline discounting is a serious business. We can't give reduced rates to just anybody."

"Why not?"

"Because the idea of a discount is not to give old customers a break, but to attract new customers. For example, if you're a businessman and travel all the time on our line, there is no reason why we should make a lower price for you. We're after the tourist who has never flown with us."

"You would think that businessmen would get the discount since they're your best customers."

"You're entitled to the discount if you stay seven days."

"Why seven days? Why not a month or a year?"

"Our computer discovered if you stay more than seven days and less than 30 you probably had nothing serious on your mind. We wouldn't want you to just do what you had to do and then turn around and fly home."

"I never thought about it before."

"Do you want the discount or don't you?"

"Yes, I imagine I do, though frankly I hadn't planned to spend seven days in Los Angeles."

"We won't tolerate perjury. If you say you'll spend seven days there and you don't, we'll find out about it. Our sales-promotion people are everywhere. Just last week a man said he would be in Miami for two weeks and we gave him the full discount. Then one of our agents spotted him at Disney World in Orlando. We ripped up his ticket on the spot."

"Suppose I, in good faith, said I was going to remain in Los Angeles for seven days, but then something unexpected happened and I had to leave on Friday. Would that still be held against me?"

"You could appeal your case at the Airline Discount Control Court in Burbank. But you would have to appear before the nine judges no later than 72 hours before you plan to leave Los Angeles."

"Suppose I don't tell anyone and just sneak on the plane?"

"There will be lie detectors at all the antihijacking search areas. You'll walk through a device, and if it shows your heart is beating too fast federal marshals will take you to a room for questioning. We take a dim view of discount cheaters."

"What can you do to me besides make me pay the full fare?"

"Lose your luggage."

Now what's happening to farm prices?

By NEA-London Economist News Service

WASHINGTON (LENS) — Farm prices are dropping away on the Chicago commodity markets, putting a question mark over American agricultural policy.

Lower grain and meat prices should slow inflation on the supermarket shelves which, after last year's 14 per cent jump in food prices, will bring relief to housewives and politicians alike.

But the cost will be felt across the foreign exchanges.

The United States now earns $21 billion a year from farm exports, considerably more than its oil import bill. Those earnings, which have more than doubled in the last two years, have now become the major prop under the balance of payments; but their value would be more vulnerable to any prolonged decline in prices than a drop in the volume of farm exports.

Suddenly the Chicago Board of Trade is a buyer's market. In the last three months, soybeans, the country's largest cash export, have fallen by 25 per cent to $6 a bushel, wheat is off 22 per cent and maize, despite a lowyielding crop last year, is down 12 per cent.

LENS London

Russia and China have helped push prices down by cancelling contracts for 800,000 tons of wheat and most export buyers are lying low: a host of bad news for America's balance of payments.

The turn in the market will test the policy that Earl Butz, the Secretary of Agriculture, has followed over the last two years of getting the government out of the costly business of farm support. So far the policy has worked well.

The administration no longer pays farmers to keep land fallow nor substitizes the huge grain reserves that traditionally piled up at government expense. Although this policy is saving the federal purse about $4 billion a year it has succeeded mainly because farm prices have soared at exactly the time of the government pull-out and grain stocks have almost dwindled away.

If the free market now turns sour, farmers can soon be bleating for government assistance again. Livestock farmers are already in trouble. About 15 per cent has been knocked off pig production in the last year and 12 per cent off poultry and eggs because of high feed prices; and a spate of bankruptcies has hit the beef-cattle industry, where market prices have dropped 25 per cent in a year of spiralling costs.

Butz, one of the few agronomists to have headed the Department of Agriculture (having been dean of the farm school at Purdue University, Indiana) insists that these hard times are the healthy result of a free market system at work and that government intervention would only upset the self-correcting balance.

But Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., the chairman of the Senate Agriculture committee, is already trying to secure higher farm support prices in the fear that commodity prices on the free market may fall below the cost of production on some farms, a possibility which Butz regards without undue worry.

Butz's tenure in the department, however, is far from secure. He has made himself unpopular with Congress, after some unguarded humor, and with the housewife, who has seen little more to his freemarket policy than constantly rising prices.

President Ford, casting around for a cabinet of his own making, may well soon find a replacement.

The Butz policy, however, is likely to remain. Prices are still high enough to have encouraged grain farmers to go for another record crop this autumn. Early estimates of this year's plantings show that 57 million acres will be under soybeans (8 per cent above last year) and 76 million acres will be sown with maize.

America's grain crop therefore should be substantially up on last year's, which was hampered by a prolonged drought that cut yields sharply.

It is still far too early to make harvest predictions but it is now a probability that, taking into account planting prospects in Canada and Australia (and assuming there is no disaster with the Russian crop) surplus grains will be piling up in midwestern granaries with this year's harvest after three years of running down.

Although carry-over stocks by this June will probably be at their lowest level for 20 years, the administration is now facing the problem of how to handle this surplus without depressing prices further and undercutting the balance of payments.

In anticipation President Ford has been able to lift the food aid program by 66 per cent to $1.6 billion, and the Department of Agriculture, which was curtailing export shipments of wheat until only last month, has now eased almost all restrictions.

The administration is playing something of a double game. It is anxious that the United States should be the world's major food supplier (the country already provides 60 per cent of the international trade in feed grains) but it is unwilling to finance the back-up service of being the world's storehouse that proved so costly throughout the 1960s.

This is a safe policy for the domestic market since if crops fail the United States can always impose an export embargo. But it is a dangerous one for foreign buyers.

Japan, which is the largest importer of American food, is particularly unhappy, still smarting from the sudden embargo on soybean exports that former President Nixon slapped on in 1973, which threatened to destroy Japan's livestock industry.

As a result the Japanese have turned increasingly to other suppliers and they are soon expected to start talks in Washington on opening their own storage silos in the United States. But the administration is being slow to take up this idea: Japan is demanding diplomatic sovereignty over the granaries.

Some more coherent policy on grain reserves will need to be worked out by the government in the next few months as the United States comes under increasing pressure both from its regular clients and from the developing world, which has always regarded the presence of large grain reserves in America as its ultimate safeguard against starvation. Yet Butz is determined that the bumper harvest he expects this year should be stored at the expense and at the risk of the farmers themselves — and to make quite sure he gets his way he has already sold off all of the government's silos to private enterprise.

Canada opens debate on North

By WILLIAM BORDERS
© New York Times Service

YELLOWKNIFE, Northwest Territories — In a crowded hotel meeting room here, 300 miles below the Arctic Circle, Canada has opened a far-reaching national debate on the future of her vast northlands.

The public hearing, which began March 3 and may last for months, is considering the proposed construction of a $7 billion pipeline to bring natural gas down from Alaska and the Canadian shore of the Arctic Ocean to consumers in the United States and Southern Canada.

But as Thomas R. Berger, the commissioner conducting the hearding, has repeatedly stressed, "This inquiry is not just about a pipeline."

"It is a social, economic and environmental impact study whose magnitude is without precedent in the history of our country," explained Berger, a 41-year-old justice of the British Columbia supreme court, who was appointed to this task by the federal cabinet.

Because of the extent to which the proposed 2,600-mile pipeline would open the North, some Canadians regard it as comparable to this country's first transcontinental railroad, whose construction nearly 100 years ago opened the West.

The competing points of view about the project were reflected by the different kinds of Canadians who were here this week — the elegantly-tailored financiers and lawyers, who came to this rough frontier town from Toronto in a private jet plane; the Indians, dressed in fur-trimmed parkas and hand-stitched moccasins, who came with fears about things such as muskrat-trapping rights, and the scientists, wearing the tweeds of the campus, who brought charts, slides and graphs.

They brought hundreds of questions for the judge to consider before he reports back to the cabinet. Here are a few examples:

How will the pipeline affect Caribou migration in the river valley? What about the delicate Arctic flowers and shrubs? Will it change the Indians' traditional way of life to an unacceptable extent? How will the primitive northern economy be affected by the pipeline, which its proponents say will be the largest construction project ever undertaken anywhere with private capital?

At a time of increasing Canadian nationalism and heightened concern both here and in the United States about energy supplies, the pipeline question also has enormous political ramifications. At the first session here Reginald Gibbs, a lawyer for a smaller, competing line, scornfully referred to the pipeline as "the equivalent Panama Canal across Canada," and declared:

"It seems incredible that we should be expected willingly and gratefully to use Canadian land, Canadian treasures and Canadian talents to the end that there can be sucked away to foreign uses a precious Canadian resource which will be needed by Canadians."

Of the 4.5 billion cubic feet of gas that the pipeline will be designed to deliver daily, half would come from northern Alaska and half from the delta of the Mackenzie River in Canada.

At the southern end of the line, all of the American gas would go to American consumers. As for the Canadian gas, the pipeline builders initially expected that at least a portion of it would be sold to the United States. But now they say that it seems more likely that all of it will be needed in Canada, right from the start.

"Canada is faced with an imminent and serious shortage of energy — in particular natural gas," declared the opening statement by the 21-member consortium, which is called Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Ltd.

But unlike the rest of the industrial world, this country has no particular energy shortages now, and despite a vigorous public relations campaign the pipeline planners have had some difficulty persuading the people that a shortage is forthcoming.

Arctic Gas Pipeline, Ltd., which consists largely of American and Canadian gas companies, has spent $75 million preparing its application, which will be considered not only by Justice Berger, but also by the National Energy Board in Ottawa and the Federal Power Commission in Washington.

Of that total, $12 million has been spent on what the company calls "the world's largest privately financed environmental study program," covering the animals and birds in the area and the fish and the water of the broad Mackenzie which meanders more than 1,000 miles through sparse and desolate pine forests, before emptying into the Beaufort Sea.

In response to environmental concerns, the company points out that the pipeline would be buried for almost its entire length, and it refers to the proposed right of way as "only 40 square miles," a negligible area in this huge land.

But people who oppose the project on environmental grounds say they are concerned not only about the operation of the finished pipeline, but also about the disruption caused by its construction which could begin in late 1978, and by the development, such as roads and camps, that is likely to accompany the line as it moves across the frozen wilderness.

As for the native land claims, the company acknowledges its responsibility to compensate owners of the land, including, possibly, the Indians, who like their ancestors, used this land for fishing, hunting and trapping.

But that is not enough for some northerners. One widespread Indian view was stated by James Wah-Shee, the president of the Indian Brotherhood of the Northwest Terroritles:

"The destruction of our way of life in return for compensation, and a menial role for native people in outside-initiated development irrelevant to our needs, cannot be assumed by Arctic Gas."

Another obstacle to this proposed pipeline is competition from the El Paso Natural Gas Co., which has applied to build a gas pipeline in Alaska, paralleling the Alyeska oil pipeline there.

That line would provide an alternative route by which American gas could reach American consumers, and it is generally conceded there that approval of it in Washington would kill the Arctic Gas proposal, since not enough gas has been discovered in the Mackenzie delta to justify building a pipeline for Canadian gas alone.

Taking advantage of the new mood of nationalism in both Washington and Ottawa in regard to energy supplies, El Paso calls its alternative proposal "the all-American line," which would need only Washington approval.

Similarly, on this side of the border, proponents of a smaller transmission system that would compete with the Arctic Gas proposal call it "the Maple Leaf line," to emphasize that it would be all-Canadian.

There is some concern among Arctic gas executives that the lengthiness of their own application process might enable El Paso to pull ahead of them in the planning stage. Justice Berger, committed to a thorough hearing, says:

"I will not diminish anyone's right to be heard, nor will I curtail this inquiry so as to improve Arctic Gas's position in relation to the El Paso proposals in the United States."

Street project opposed

Editor, Times-News:

I wonder how many of our citizens know that the beautiful trees which line Second Avenue from Eighth Street to Fourth Street West are scheduled to be cut down this year.

I have lived on this street for nearly two years and I knew nothing about it until recently when a highway department representative called at my house to tell me about the plans and to ask me to grant an easement for them to proceed.

They hope to start by July or August 1975.

The plan, as I understand it, is:

1. To remove the existing sidewalks on both sides of the street.
2. To remove the parking strip and all the trees.
3. To widen the street and resurface with asphalt.
4. To put in a new sidewalk four feet wide to replace the present three-foot-wide walk. New walk will extend to property lines. Thus it will encroach about three feet into my present front lawn.
5. To put in new curbs and gutters, also storm sewers where needed.
6. To add about 10 feet of pavement onto each side of the street. This will allow for parking on either side, also three lanes of fast traffic. The money could be better spend elsewhere.

My main objections are as follows:

1. Trucks should by-pass our city, not be routed through the heart of town.
2. Property values in this stretch of Second Avenue West are bound to go down.
3. It will destroy the beauty of one of our most important and beautiful thoroughfares.
4. It will provide more lanes for trucks and other traffic to speed through our downtown area.
5. It will add additional burdens to our already overburdened police force.
6. It will make a better racetrack for speeders who now can be clocked at excessive speed almost anytime.
7. It will add additional hazards for pedestrians, particularly for our children who must cross Second Avenue to get to school.

I wonder why this plan has not received more publicity. There surely would be much opposition from our local citizens if they knew.

Stiff pollution rules mandatory

Editor, Times-News:

A revealing news article appeared in the Times-News last Friday which should have the citizens of southern Idaho food for thought.

It concerned the two companies building the Jim Bridger coal-fired plant in Wyoming. The companies were given approval to build based on the then current emission standards set by the EPA, a federal agency.

In the meantime, a state agency has been created to further safeguard the air breathed by Wyoming citizens.

The Wyoming Environmental Quality Council decided that somewhat stricter standards are needed for sulphur dioxide emissions.

The companies building the plant have filed a petition in court to have the new stricter standards declared illegal because the additional equipment required will force an increase in customer rates.

The companies involved are Pacific Power and Light of California and our own Idaho Power Co.

Idaho Power's reaction to this situation makes me wonder how much "good faith" backs its promise to protect the Idaho environment? What will happen when it is faced with a similar situation while building or operating a coal-fired plant in Idaho? I believe they have been tested and failed.

Emission standards will be changed, probably getting stricter, as more is learned about the causes and effects of air pollution. If Idaho Power is not willing to meet new emission standards as they are set up in the future, then they should not be allowed to build the coal-fired plant in Idaho, or anywhere else.

We expect the electricity to cost more, but that's a small price to pay for clean air that doesn't cause allergies, emphysema, asthma and cancer.

Fly oil out

Editor, Times-News:

When we consider the great ability our Air Force has to move cargo, would it not be worth while to use all capable planes to move oil from Alaska to us while the pipeline is being installed?

I believe that such a worthy cause would get the immediate and undivided attention of many capable and willing men who need work.

And it seems that most of our planes are becoming outdated, so they just as well wear out as rust out.

Must we pay such unreasonable prices if we can help our fuel supply so much so easy and keep our money at home?

I believe our Air Force would accept such an assignment and we would feel its help at once.

Prayer for today

We watch too much television, God. It's so easy to sit down and be entertained without making any more effort than turning a dial.

Within reason television viewing can be worthwhile, but we aren't reasonable. We don't always like what we see, but it doesn't cost anything, so we can't lose. But are we losing? Are we losing the time we could spend in some more profitable activity? Are we becoming more tolerant of the questionable things which we hear or see? Could we even be losing some of the sharpness of our thinking abilities?

Help us to seriously consider the way we spend our leisure hours and be strong enough to do something about it. Uletta Martin, Buhl.

Kissinger, Sadat huddle on Sinai deal

©New York Times Service

ASWAN, Egypt — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger began his latest round of "shuttle diplomacy" by holding an extensive and detailed discussion Saturday with President Anwar El-Sadat that was said to have produced precise ideas on how to attain a new disengagement agreement on Sinai between Egypt and Israel.

But after three hours of private talks, the gap between the two sides seemed still to be wide.

Sadat told newsmen Saturday night that he believed the Kissinger effort would be "very hard," tougher than any previous negotiations.

Sadat conceded, however, that it was too soon to tell what the outcome would be.

Kissinger, stressing the positive, said at the same news conference that he remained convinced that "progress is possible" in the negotiations.

Following the initial two-hour meeting at Sadat's vacation home in this upper Nile resort town, Kissinger seemed very relaxed when he told a few newsmen near his hotel swimming pool that the talks were "good" and "useful."

He declined to go into details, but later it was learned authoritatively from a participant that after months of probing, Kissinger got specific Egyptian proposals to present to the Israelis when he arrives in Jerusalem today on the next leg of his mission. Details of the proposals were not disclosed.

Israeli 'dove' backs US policy

©New York Times Service

JERUSALEM — The prevalent view among Israelis discussing Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's return visit to the Middle East is that Kissinger will pressure Israeli leaders to give up too much in return for too little.

But that is not the view of Azrieh Eliav, a member of parliament for the governing Labor Party, its former secretary general and Israel's leading "dove."

To Eliav, American policy toward Israel has been consistently right since the 1967 war, and Israeli government policy wrong.

In an interview in his bare, whitewashed Knesset office, the 53-year-old Russian-born maverick, whom friends and opponents alike affectionately call "Lyova," said:

"From '67 on, the Johnson Administration, then the Nixon administration, then the Ford administration have been telling us: look, you have to make up your mind. What kind of Israel do you want? Our American position is that we'll do everything in our power short of sending our boys to help you to exist.

"But you have to know that our basic position is that your state of Israel is the state of Israel of the '67 borders plus adjustments for security reasons here and there.

"They were consistent in what they were saying, and it corresponds to what I said."

Eliav believes that Israel should announce her readiness to return the Arab territories she seized in 1967 in return for full peace. He believes also that Israel should declare her readiness to meet and negotiate with representatives of the Palestinians, including the Palestine Liberation Organization, on condition that they recognize Israel's right to exist and foreswear terrorism.

Captured Arab tells raid plan

TEL AVIV (UPI) — The only survivor of eight Arab guerrillas who attacked Tel Aviv's beachfront said Saturday the raid was designed to disrupt a possible peace agreement between Egypt and Israel.

Mussa Juma'a, born in Beersheba 23 years ago, said he and his seven comrades attacked the Savoy Hotel Wednesday night after sailing from Lebanon and spending three days at sea.

In a meeting with foreign newsmen, Juma'a was asked if the purpose of the raid was to blame Egypt and therefore obstruct Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's Middle East peace mission.

"Yes," he replied. "We were asked to say, in case we were taken prisoner, that we came from Port Said."

Eighteen persons died in the attack, including Juma'a's seven guerrilla comrades.

Juma'a said the guerrillas originally planned to raid a youth club, take hostages and bargain for the release of guerrilla prisoners in Israel, including Greek Catholic Archbishop Hilarion Capucci, convicted of smuggling guerrilla arms from Lebanon.

Juma'a was interviewed along with three crew members of the captured 60-foot motor-sailing vessel that dropped off the raiding party in rubber boats 30 miles west of Tel Aviv.

"The first thing we did on shore in Tel Aviv was shooting at parked cars and then we went to the building that you know of," he said.

"The target was not expressly this hotel, but we chose it," he said. "We shot at everybody who was in sight."

Juma'a said he was a member of Al Fatah guerrillas since 1970, trained in Syria and moved to Lebanon several months ago.

Hamid Nadin, 20, the Fatah coordinating man on the mother ship that dropped off the guerrillas, corroborated Juma'a's claim that the raid was designed to disrupt a possible military accord between Egypt and Israel.

He said that looking back on the operation, he had to consider it a mistaken, failed mission.

The other crew members of the mother ship at the interview were Mohammad Abdul Rahud Juda, 31, of Port Said, and Mohammad Hassan Sa'ad, 25, of Damietta, Egypt. Neither spoke to reporters.

Reagan hits Republican 'compromise'

RONALD REAGAN

. . . slaps Ford

©New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Former Governor Ronald Reagan of California took a firm stand Saturday against President Ford, Vice President Rockefeller and others who have called for a Republican Party broad enough to include moderates and liberals as well as conservatives.

"A political party cannot be all things to all people," the California conservative said in a speech to the closing session of the Republican Leadership Conference. "It cannot compromise its fundamental beliefs for political expediency, or simply to swell its numbers.

"It is not a social club or fraternity engaged in intramural contests to accumulate trophies on the mantel over the fireplace."

Reagan repeatedly brought the crowd of more than 2,000 grass-roots party leaders to its feet with his old-time Republican religion — a sermon on the desirability of a balanced budget, strong national defense, individual freedom and domestic law-and-order.

Like virtually all the speakers at the conference, he called for a revitalized Republican Party — he called it "a new second party" — rather than the third party some conservatives have been advocating.

But the vision offered by Reagan was different.

He argued that the Republicans did badly in 1974 partly because of Watergate, but also because the mass of the electorate was unable to see any differences between the two major parties and chose to stay at home.

"No one can quarrel with the idea that a political party hopes it can attract a wide following," he said, "but does it do this by foresaking its basic beliefs? By blurring its own image so as to be indistinguishable from the opposition party?

"Does any Republican seriously believe that any Democrats who subscribe to the profligacy, the big government policies of the present Democratic leadership will be won over to our side if we say these are our policies, too?"

The former governor quoted the late Senator Robert A. Taft as having said in 1953, "The only parties that have died are those which have forgotten or abandoned the principles upon which they were founded. A party kills itself and removes any excuse for its existence when it adopts the principles of its opponents."

Cambodian generals fired; offensive fails

© New York Times Service

PHNOM PENH — The Cambodian command fired the commanding generals of two key units Friday and replaced them with younger men in an apparently American inspired effort to inject some new life into the faltering defense of the capital.

At the same time, a key advisor to Marshal Lon Nol, Gen. Chhim Chhuon, was removed as head of the territorial forces in Phnom Penh, while at the same time retaining his command of the main forces responsible for the city's outer defenses.

The biggest disappointment Saturday to the Cambodian command and Western military observers was in the key northwestern sector, where government forces beginning yet another "all-out" offensive" to knock out enemy rocket positions, failed to make any significant contact with the enemy.

These rocket positions north of the town of Tuol Leap continued, in fact, to launch rockets — at least 40 — at Pochentong airport, the capital's main supply route.

However, supply flights and international flights continued.

An Air Cambodge Caravelle jet arrived from Bangkok with a full load of foreign newsmen and departed with a full load consisting principally of wealthy Cambodian nationals.

Kissinger shunned talks

© New York Times Service

PHNOM PENH — Ambassador John Gunther Dean was rebuffed last year when he proposed to Secretary of State Kissinger that an attempt be made to establish contact with a key Cambodian insurgent leader to feel out the possibility of peace negotiations, according to sources in the United States embassy here.

The sources said that Dean, who has was now in Phnom Penh at the time but had already begun pushing for peace initiatives, recommended contact with Khieu Samphan, perhaps the leading figure in the insurgent movement. He is a deputy premier, defense minister and commander in chief of the armed forces.

At the time of Dean's proposal last April, Samphan was touring Eastern Europe and Africa to rally support for his cause. Dean, according to the embassy sources, felt this was a perfect opportunity with for contact. The ambassador was quoted by those familiar with the episode, as having said, "Every straw should be grasped at."

Kissinger rejected the proposal, the sources said, on the ground that the fighting was going poorly at the time and the United States would have been in a position of negotiating from weakness.

Long-time observers note, however, that the situation has never been favorable for the Phnom Penh government since the war began in 1970.

The state department did not mention the Dean proposal when it announced three days ago that Washington had made "numerous attempts at negotiations with the insurgents," but had been rebuffed.

The announcement was made at a news conference by Philip C. Habib, assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific affairs, who listed seven efforts since 1973.

Habib was questioned by newsmen as to the seriousness of these efforts. He insisted they had been sincere and he rejected suggestions, made in recent news dispatches, that Kissinger was not enthusiastic about negotiations.

Kissinger's critics have said that he lacks interest in peace talks because Cambodia is a small, inconsequential country, it is a losing situation for the United States and he does not want to be identified with defeats.

Women trek Fifth Avenue

©New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Chilled by brisk March winds, hundreds of women from a coalition of 50 women's groups marched down Fifth Avenue Saturday in celebration of International Women's Day.

The parade route stretched for 27 blocks, from the New York Public Library, at 41st Street and Fifth Avenue, to Union Square, where a rally was held.

The women, many of them carrying colorful signs and banners denoting their various organizations, marched on the east side of Fifth Avenue. They were led by women carrying a huge red, white and blue banner reading: "International Women's Day Coalition — March 8, 1975."

Behind them was a motley group in purple, the Victoria Woodhull Marching Band, an all-woman band whose bass drummer said: "You don't have to know anything about music to join our group."

The posters said such things as "We refuse to be shock absorbers for capitalism's crisis," "Reverse the Edelin verdict," "Recession, depression, wars — women can do better" and "120,000 women in Saigon's jails."

Name file destroyed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Central Intelligence Agency and the U.S. Army helped the Washington, D.C. police department develop a surveillance system which produced a 20,000 name index file now being destroyed, it was reported Saturday.

When the 1968 riots hit Washington, the local police asked for help from the Army and CIA to build a card file on 20,000 persons and full files on a smaller number.

The full files have been destroyed during the past six months and the index file was about 60 per cent destroyed by Saturday.

Freelance investigative reporter Susan Truitt reported that the Metropolitan Police Department allowed her access to the Intelligence Division, which has been under heavy criticism for alleged spying on prominent local citizens.

The Baltimore police department is also under investigation by the Maryland General Assembly for similar incidents which included even maintaining a file on Gov. Marvin Mandel, according to a report in Friday's Baltimore News American.

An account of the Washington police department's activities was given to Mayor Walter E. Washington Friday by police chief Maurice Cullinane but its contents have not been revealed.

But Truitt and the Washington Post reported Saturday that the division had spent $148,000 since 1968 compiling information on anti-war and other protest groups and leaders, including six present District of Columbia city councilmen, and at least one congressman the police believed was associated with gamblers.

CIA agents traveled in D.C. police patrol cars between 1968 and 1971 and the CIA lent the D.C. police department cars, radio transmitters and receivers, and even a secret CIA local radio frequency. When the D.C. police no longer requested CIA assistance in 1971, agents continued to travel with officers.

"They must have been gathering information for their own files," said one highranking police official.

Cullinane said the files on the six city councilmen and other public figures were developed while they were activists and the information gathering ceased when they entered politics.

The names of a number of nationally prominent figures appeared on the index cards, including actress Candice Bergen, economist Walter Heller and Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., but police denied they had spied on the three or kept files on them.

Cullinane told the Post the police surveillance included only public activities of the person involved, with "nothing about their private lives."

However, Truitt said another file system had existed for 30 years in the Morals Division but had been inactive since 1964 and was destroyed last year.

Black leader's body exhumed

© 1975, Chicago Daily News

CHICAGO — The body of Elijah Muhammad, the spiritual leader of the Nation of Islam, popularly called the Black Muslims, who died Feb. 25, has been removed from its grave in the suburban Mount Glenwood cemetery.

Workers with heavy equipment and a crane were seen in the cemetery Friday digging up the heavy $20,000 silver, sealed coffin. It reportedly was taken to the Temple of Islam on Chicago's South Side.

Charles 67X, editor of Muhammad Speaks, the sect's newspaper, Friday disclaimed any knowledge of the removal and reburial on temple grounds.

But he did say leaders of the nation previously had considered interring Muhammad and his wife, Clara, who died in 1972 and was buried at Mount Glenwood, in "an appropriate place, suitable for a shrine."

Study claims utilities lax in operating nuke plants

© 1975 New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — A federal study has concluded that the utilities that own most American nuclear reactors, which have recently been generating only about 55 per cent of their power capacity — are not sufficiently concerned about the safety and performance of their reactors.

The study further charges that the state commissions that are supposed to regulate the utilities have "little or no influence" on the design process that could make reactors more reliable and efficient.

The analysis of reactor reliability and what steps the federal government should take to improve it was written by Edwin G. Triner, director of the Office of Policy Planning in the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Triner said the utilities, in theory, should have prime responsibility for making sure that the reactors they buy are both safe and efficient.

"The reality, however, is that without external persuasion the likelihood of the utility customer taking agressive action to improve plant reliability is not very great," he said.

There are 55 nuclear plants operating in the United States that generate about 7.5 per cent of the country's electricity. Because of various problems in the continuing supply of oil and natural gas, the Ford administration is committed to building hundreds of additional reactors in the next 10 years.

Triner's five-page analysis of reactor reliability, dated Dec. 2, 1974, was made available by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission in response to a request by Daniel Ford, staff director of the Union of Concerned Scientist, an organization that has been critical of atomic power.

Triner's study described a number of factors that he felt contributed to the reliability problem.

"By and large, the utilities are not that sophisticated," the official said. "There is no evidence, for example, that they have contractually imposed reliability standards upon their architect-engineers.

Very few of the utilities exercise very much influence at all over the design process as it impacts reliability."

He said that a second factor was the reluctance of the utilities to incur extra design costs during the early stages of a nuclear reactor building project which would require them to generate additional capital.

"There is no incentive for them to make a total life cycle cost analysis that includes both design and construction cost and the 30 or 40 years of operating and maintenance cost," Triner wrote.

Bank to boost farm aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The World Bank said Saturday it will double its aid to the world's poorest farmers over the next five years to help improve their health and the world food supply.

The Bank, which already is the largest outside investor in the agriculture of developing nations, said it will allocate a total of $7.2 billion through mid-1980 to finance improved agriculture methods and health programs to 100 million farmers, mostly in Asia and Latin America.

Of these, at least 60 million will be farmers who own less than three acres of land and earn under $50 each year.

The expanded project will have three goals, the bank said:

—Provide tools, seeds and training to farmers to help them increase the generally poor outputs of their land.

—"Improve the physical wellbeing and quality of the life of the rural poor" in order to "directly raise their productivity and their ability to contribute to the national economy." Better health, education and housing would be among these activities.

—Expand already efficient agricultural industries to produce more food for domestic consumption or export and relieve food shortages.

By the end of 1979, the World Bank said it hoped to lend $1 billion annually for rural development alone, twice the present lending figure.

Assassination link considered

David W. Belin, the executive director of the panel headed by Vice President Rockefeller, the Presidential Commission of C.I.A. activities within the United States, declined Friday to comment on specific areas of the panel's inquiry or on any tentative conclusions it might have reached.

The commission has decided, Belin said, to release its findings about the future and scope of the C.I.A.'s domestic activities only after its investigation has been completed.

Belin, an Iowa lawyer who served as a counsel to the Warren Commission, said that although it was not his intention to "reopen the entire investigation of the assassination" of President Kennedy, "the allegation has been made that the C.I.A., and particularly Hunt, was in Dallas on 22 Nov. 1963."

After leaving the Warren Commission, Belin wrote a book analyzing its work entitled, "You Are the Jury," supporting President Kennedy and J.D. Tippit, a Dallas police officer slain shortly afterward outside a movie theater.

Asked for a professional assessment of any evidence gathered by the Rockefeller commission hearing on a possible C.I.A. role in the Kennedy assassination, Belin replied:

"Thus far, I have found no hard evidence whatsoever to indicate that there was any person involved in the assassination of John F. Kennedy other than Lee Harvey Oswald."

FBI attempted to silence King

Another source, attached to the bureau at that time, said that he believed the recording was on a party held by King and officials of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which Dr. King headed, in the Willard Hotel in Washington in the fall of 1963. The source said the party had been picked up by an F.B.I. electronic bug in the room and put on tape.

Bureau officials, according to sources, felt at the time that the content of the tape was detrimental to King and some of his associates because it recounted activities at the party they thought did not conform with the rights leader's position as a religious leader.

The tape and the package had been prepared so they could not be traced, one source said. He said Hoover wanted the tape mailed from somewhere in Florida and that Sullivan had ordered a special agent to fly to Tampa and mail the tape to Mrs. King. The source stressed theat the agent had no idea of the contents.

The source said the Hoover believed the sending of the tape to Mrs. King would stop King's criticism of the burea and break up his marriage as well.

Mrs. King said in a telephone interview that she recalled receiving a tape recording in January, 1965.

"I received a tape that was rather curious, unlabeled," she said. "As a matter of fact, Martin and I listened to the tape and we found much of it unintelligible. We concluded there was nothing in the tape to discredit him."

Mrs. King said that she and her husband immediately realized that the tape had been made covertly and "presumed" it had been made by the F.B.I.

Murtaugh, 53, who now lives in Constable, N.Y., said the "trick" of sending the tape of Mrs. King to discredit her husband was well known "among senior agents in the Atlanta Bureau and some of them bragged about it as a smart stunt."

According to two former senior F.B.I. official's, a wiretap on King later picked up a conversation in which King told a friend that he was deeply concerned about the pressure being placed upon him.

S.C.L.C. sources from that era say that King never wavered in his leadership of the movement and that the harassment failed.

Pay proposal solution sought

BOISE (UPI) — A subcommittee of the Senate State Affairs Committee began today to hammer out a pay proposal for state employes which it could 'sell' to the legislature and the employes.

Chairman H. Dean Summers, R-Boise, said he hoped something could be accomplished for consideration by the full committee Monday.

The committee has tried to reach agreement on several proposals, but so far members have not been able to come up with a solution to the pay problem.

Earlier in the session, a resolution was adopted directing the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee to give a 3.5-per cent across-the-board pay boost, plus reallocations.

However, some legislators feel that state employes deserve a better break and that's why the State Affairs Committee is attempting to come up with a proposal to give them a little more.

Among proposals batted back and forth by the committee Friday were one which would give state employes a bonus from surplus funds, and another which would provide a 7.5-per cent increase if a $3.5 million surplus existed July 1.

Boise attorney William Rode, representing the State Employes Association, said the bonus proposal was the "most unrealistic approach to solving the salary problem we have."

He said the other measure was by far the best solution.

One of the solutions which the subcommittee will consider is providing a float dollar amount and a 3.5-per cent increase out of the surplus on hand at the end of the fiscal year June 30.

Meantime House Democrats were still dragging their feet on appropriations bills—questioning the sponsor on the floor about pay increases and other factors in a continuing effort to needle the GOP about state employe pay hikes.

Elsewhere on the legislative scene:

— The Senate Finance Committee introduced a bill appropriating $1.5 million from the general fund to the Transportation Department for apportionment to various counties and $1 million from the general fund for apportionment to the cities for road and street repair.

— After a lengthy debate, the Senate voted 19-15 to send to committee of the whole for amendment a bill which would outlaw piracy of sound recordings.

— At the request of the leadership, Republican members of the House Appropriations Committee forced introduction of a bill spending $10 million on tax relief and endowments.

— By a party line vote of 6-4, the Senate State Affairs Committee voted to introduce a concurrent resolution changing the makeup of the Lieu Lands Committee.

— The Senate State Affairs Committee agreed to print an amendment which would allow all school districts to receive public kindergarten funds even if they did not institute the program.

Panel change sparks protest

BOISE (UPI) — Putting industry and labor representatives on the Human Rights Commission would be like putting three people from Idaho Power Company on the Public Utilities Commission," a former chairman said Saturday.

Glenn Selander, Boise, made the statement in testimony before the House State Affairs Committee against a bill to change makeup of the commission.

He was joined by director Charles Nicholas in his opposition to the bill. Gregory Panter, a representative of the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry, spoke on behalf of the measure.

After the hearing some committee members tried to kill the proposal by holding it indefinitely. But Rep. George Danielson, R-Cambridge, offered an amended motion to hold the measure until Monday when the full committee could be there to discuss it. Danielson prevailed.

Under the proposal, membership on the commission eventually would consist of two representatives of industry, two representatives of labor, a licensed realtor, an attorney and three members appointed at large.

Nicholas said he agreed with the sponsors of the bill that the commission needs to be improved but he said this will would do more harm than good and eventually could lead to a federal takeover of civil rights investigations in Idaho.

"In the past four years," he said, the commission investigated 90 cases of discrimination and found cause in only about 10 per cent of them. Yet, he said, a federal investigator recently found case in a substantial number of them when he reviewed commission records.

Inadequate funding and lack of subpoena powers are two of the basic problems of the present human rights commission, he said. Changing the makeup of the group would not resolve those problems.

Doctors cite coal-fired plant 'bombshell'

BOISE (UPI) — Ada County physicians told their legislators Friday the Environmental Protection Agency may exempt a proposed coal-fired power plant near Orchard from Class II air quality standards.

Dr. Harold W. Hatten said the EPA letter saying the proposed Idaho Power Co. plant would be exempt was a "bombshell" that surprised the doctors.

He and other doctors speaking for the Ada County Medical Society and the Central District Health Department of Ada, Elmore, Boise and Valley Counties urged the lawmakers to support a power plant siting bill.

Dr. Michael Gibson said the EPA letter means sulfur dioxide concentrations could reach 80 micrograms per cubic meter on an annual basis.

This would allow a 24-hour maximum of 365 micrograms per cubic meter, he said.

A 365 level is not adequate to protect persons suffering from asthma and chronic bronchitis, he said, adding a pollution level of half that amount will cause asthma attacks.

"We'll have more asthmatics coming into the emergency room," he said. "Through a loophole this plant doesn't have to meet the standards."

Dr. Lee Stokes, director of air and water quality for the state Department of Health and Welfare, said the state will challenge the EPA interpretation.

Director Douglas C. Hansen of the region 10 EPA office in Seattle wrote Dr. Gibson that the pioneer one plant is exempt from Class II regulations because power boilers and steam turbines already have been ordered by the company.

Hansen said the source would be subject to review if construction had not been started before June 1, 1975.

Rebate bill approved

BOISE (UPI) — A do-pass recommendation was given by the Senate local government and Taxation Committee to a bill to give a 12 per cent rebate to taxpayers on 1974 income tax returns.

Chairman Lyle Cobbs, R-Boise, said he had been asked to consider the bill since it had been disclosed that the anticipated surplus would be $7.1 million more than originally thought.

The bill would provide a rebate of approximately $10.8 million.

Earlier this week, Gov. Cecil D. Andrus vetoed a bill which would have given a 10 per cent rebate or $9 million in refunds from the surplus.

Circuit breaker extended

BOISE (UPI) — House taxwriters sent to the floor with a favorable recommendation today a bill to extend circuit breaker tax relief to renters.

Chairman Steve Antone, R-Rupert, and Rep. Wayne Tibbitts, R-Lorenzo, voted with the Democrats to send out the bill for consideration. The vote was 9-7.

Carey Act resolution OK'd

BOISE (UPI) — A House approved memorial asking Congress to change the 1894 Carey Act to allow a man and wife to file on 160 acres of desert entry land each passed the Idaho Senate Friday.

A federal solicitor has ruled the 1974 Legislature's action to amend the Idaho Carey Act law to allow the 160 acre provision was invalid.

Tot bill amendment asked

BOISE (UPI) — Although the public kindergarten bill has not yet been signed into law, the Senate State Affairs Committee agreed Friday to print an amendment which would allow all school districts to receive the funds even if they did not institute the program.

Sen. John Barker, R-Buhl, chairman of the Senate Health, Education and Welfare Committee, asked that the amendment be printed and returned to committee.

Airport panel bill passes

BOISE (UPI) — By a vote of 48-19, the House passed and sent to the senate Friday legislation to allow airport authorities to condemn land.

Floor Sponsor W. Israel Merrill, D-Pocatello, said the bill would permit airport construction while the question of payment for the land was being decided in court.

Yost slaps GOP

BOISE (UPI) — A Republican senator from Wendell said Friday he was going to get more involved in promoting programs for the people because his party had not promoted a program for them.

"The Republicans have failed to take the offensive in promoting a legislative program in providing for and protecting the people," said Sen. James Yost.

Panel change bill voted

BOISE (UPI) — By a party-line vote of 6-4, the Senate State Affairs Committee voted Friday to introduce a concurrent resolution changing the makeup of the Lieu Lands Committee.

Earlier, the House passed a concurrent resolution which would have stripped the lieutenant governor of his chairmanship of the committee and have taken away his voting power. It is being held in a Senate committee.

Senate leader begins slowdown

BOISE (UPI) — Senate Minority Leader Cy Chase D-St. Maries, began a slowdown of the Senate today when he lost to the majority on a move to return to committee a resolution to change the makeup of the Land Grants Committee.

Chase objected to any suspension of the rules and demanded that all bills be read at length.

Chase moved that it be returned to State Affairs Committee, but his motion lost 15-19.

The resolution would change the makeup of the committee with the president pro tem of the Senate and the House speaker co-chairmen with the authority to appoint two members from each body of the legislature. Membership also would include the lieutenant governor, who at present is chairman of that committee.

As the Senate resolution was introduced, Chase objected that there was no fiscal impact as required by the rules and asked that it be returned to committee.

Chase said he wanted to know what amount of money the committee would spend, saying it was a "catch all" to expend all types of funds.

He called the resolution another "slap in the face of the lieutenant governor." He said he had tried to work out a reasonable solution in the State Affairs Committee Friday but that it was voted for introduction on a strict party-line vote by the committee.

Chase said that if the present committee structure was "good enough for the previous lieutenant governor, it's good enough for this lieutenant governor."

"It's time we quit playing games and get on with the work of the Senate," the minority leader said.

Senate President Pro Tem James Ellsworth, R-Leadore, who brought the resolution to the State Affairs Committee, said Chase's motion was just a delaying action.

Ellsworth also pointed out that the land grants committee had $52,000 available to it from a previous appropriation and "no additional appropriation will be needed."

Chase said "if you're going to play politics with this type of important committee, the people who brought it in should be responsible."

By a near party-line vote of 41-27 the House approved and sent to the Senate a measure appropriating $45,800.

Taxation bill moved

BOISE (UPI) — With two dissenting votes, the Senate Local Government and Taxation Committee today sent to the floor for amendment a House approved bill to give cities local option on taxation.

The amendment, submitted by Max Yost of the Idaho Associated Taxpayers, would require the amount of tax to be itemized separately on billings.

A spokesman for the association of Idaho cities contended that it was unnecessary. Floyd Decker said it would only "severely delay or hamper its enactment."

Yost said it was vitally important for administration of any excess tax which the cities might impose.

The bill would allow cities to have the electorate approve the type of tax they wanted.

School tax bill voted

BOISE (UPI) — Asked to help overcrowded school districts meet a "desperate situation," the House approved 46-22 Friday a bill allowing imposition of a $500 tax on new dwelling units.

Under the proposal, which goes now to the Senate, if a district has a 7 per cent growth rate for a three-year period the trustees could impose a tax of up to $500 on new units.

They also would be required to charge the one-time tax on each lot of a new mobile home park.

Bargaining bill advances

BOISE (UPI) — In a surprise move, the House State Affairs Committee sent to the floor without recommendation Friday a bill to provide for collective bargaining for public employes.

Rep. Patricia L. McDermott, D-Pocatello, tried to send out the bill with a "do pass" recomendation after a subcommittee recommended no amendments be made to the proposal.

But Rep. John Reardon, R-Boise, offered an amended motion to send it out without recommendation and Reardon's motion prevailed.

Under normal procedures the bill could come up for floor debate by Monday or Tuesday.

Enforcement of DWI law affects many citizens

By L.J. ETTINGER

©1975 by L.J. Ettinger

Drinking alcoholic beverages is legal in Idaho.

"Driving while under the influence" of alcoholic beverages is a crime. Important to the community and the drinking driver is how this law is enforced and where the line is drawn between the driver who is under the influence and the driver who is not under the influence.

The legislature that passed the present DWI law in 1970 copped out in its responsibility to enact a law that could be applied fairly and nondiscriminately. The law leaves much room for the individual law enforcement agencies and even for individual police officers to apply their own standards of what "under the influence" means.

Enforcement of the DWI law has been reasonably good. However, there have been far too many "marginal" DWI arrests made, arrests where the driver has had a few drinks but is not a real danger on the road. The driver who is the victim of the marginal arrest faces a real dilemma because it may be economically cheaper to plead guilty than fight.

The embarrassment and financial burdens that follow the arrest cannot be justified on the grounds that because the driver had a few drinks he will be a danger to others.

It is the purpose of this series of articles to discuss accepted facts about drinking, the laws affecting drinking drivers, how these laws are enforced and sometimes abused, what happens when an arrest is made, disposition through the judicial process and where changes can and should be made.

EFFECTS OF ALCOHOL

When alcohol contained in various beverages is consumed, it enters the bloodstream through the walls of the stomach and the small intestine. If the stomach is empty, alcohol transfer into the blood stream is accomplished in about 15 minutes.

However, if there is food in the stomach, the alcohol mixes with the food and is absorbed into the bloodstream as the food digests over a longer time period.

Alcohol in the bloodstream will circulate throughout the body, including the lungs and brain. It will leave the body mainly by oxidation and small losses through the breath and urine. This process of oxidation produces energy which the body can use for its needs, but is limited because the body can oxidize only a certain amount of alcohol in any given time. If alcohol is consumed faster than the body can use it, the excess accumulates in the bloodstream and tissues as a source of reserve energy. It is this buildup of alcohol in the bloodstream that affects the brain causing judgment, reflex and coordination problems that may impair driving ability.

The brain begins to be affected by alcohol when the blood-alcohol content (BAC) reaches about 0.05 per cent. This effect is anesthetic, or depressant in nature. Thought, judgment and restraint are loosened, sometimes giving a carefree feeling.

As the BAC approaches 0.10 per cent, coordination is lost, resulting in being unable to do difficult body movements that a person is normally accustomed to performing. However, most persons can perform most movements which they have conditioned themselves to do. Judgment becomes looser and decisions take slightly longer.

At 0.15 per cent BAC, judgment, reflex and coordination continue to deteriorate. Tunnel vision develops, reducing the ability to see to the sides.

At 0.20 per cent BAC, the function of the entire motor area of the brain is measurably depressed, causing poor reflexes, staggering and slurred speech. That part of the brain which mediates emotional behavior is also affected and striking changes in mood and attitudes may result.

At 0.30 per cent BAC person, although aware, is often confused and there is poor comprehension of what is heard or seen. Here a stuporous condition may begin to appear.

At 0.40 per cent BAC the stupor progresses into coma.

At 0.50 per cent BAC a person is close to death.

CALCULATING BAC

In general, three factors influence a person's BAC: The amount of alcohol consumed; the period of time over which the alcohol was consumed; and the person's body weight.

As a general rule, each drink (one ounce of "hard" liquor, one 12-ounce bottle of beer, or one 4-ounce glass of wine) will raise the BAC of an average-weight person (160 pounds) by 0.02 per cent. For lighter persons, the BAC will increase more per drink; for heavier persons, the BAC will increase less per drink.

The period of time over which alcohol is consumed is an important influence on the BAC since alcohol is oxidized at a rate of approximately 0.02 per cent BAC per hour, or about the equivalent of one drink per hour.

From these facts a general formula can be used to determine the BAC of an average-weight person. Multiply the number of drinks minus the number of hours by 0.02. The accompanying chart is a general example of fluctuation of the blood alcohol content of an average-weight person (160 pounds) who has nine drinks over a three hour period.

SOCIETY'S ATTITUDE

Most people drink to some degree and most people drive. Many drive after drinking. Nearly all will agree that the driver who drinks enough to be dangerous to others should not be on the road, and if he goes on the road, he should be arrested and removed.

Personal knowledge, opinions and biases about drinking and driving are derived from many sources, including the home environment and parents' attitudes, religious upbringing, radio and television media, books, newspapers, special classes and personal experiences.

The most important questions to be answered are: How much does a drinking driver have to drink? What exactly does a drinking driver have to do while driving to be dangerous? Here is where there is a great difference of opinion because of the varied individual attitudes.

Society has entrusted the control and enforcement of the drinking driver problem to the state lawmakers and law enforcement agencies. I feel that the lawmakers have failed in their responsibility to produce workable drinking driver laws. I also feel that a few law enforcement officers, for various reasons, have abused their authority to enforce these open-ended laws.

Applicable State Law

For many years the law controlling drinking drivers in Idaho stated that if there was greater than 0.15 per cent BAC the defendant was presumed to be under the influence.

> "The brain begins to be affected by alcohol when the blood-alcohol content (BAC) reaches about 0.05 per cent."

In 1970 this law was changed, lowering the presumed under the influence BAC to 0.08 per cent. This is still the law in Idaho although a strong effort is being made in the legislature this year to raise the BAC to 0.10 per cent. This is, in part, due to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration recommendation that every state adopt a BAC of 0.10 per cent as the level of intoxication to be under the influence while driving. Most states have already adopted this recommended 0.10 per cent BAC. A few states, including Idaho, are lower and a few states still retain the 0.15 per cent BAC level.

Present Idaho state law Section 49-1102 states that it is unlawful to drive or be in actual physical control of any motor vehicle within the state when under the influence of intoxicating beverages. Simply stated, if you have been drinking you can be arrested for DWI even if you are sitting in the driver's seat of a parked car, even if the car is on private property.

Also included in this law is the provision that the first DWI is classed as a misdemeanor and second and subsequent DWI's can be classed as felonies — at the discretion of the prosecutor.

The law also states that if the MOBAT balloon test or other blood test shows 0.08 per cent BAC there is no presumption that you are under the influence, but the BAC can be used as evidence, at least that you were drinking. If the test is higher than 0.08 per cent BAC then it is presumed that you were under the influence of intoxicating beverages.

In any criminal case the state has the burden of proving that the accused person is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt before a jury or judge can convict him of the charged crime. A presumption shifts the burden of proof to the accused person so that in a case where the BAC is greater than 0.08 per cent, the burden of proof shifts from the state having to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the accused person was under the influence of intoxicating beverages, to the accused who must present enough evidence to prove that he was not under the influence. There are times when this becomes difficult, especially when the only two witnesses are the arresting officer and the defendant.

Some persons arrested for DWI refuse to take the MOBAT test. If the driver refuses this test he is asking for more trouble than he wants. Idaho state law states that any person who operates a motor vehicle or motorcycle in this state shall be deemed to have given his consent to a chemical test for the purpose of determining the alcoholic content of his blood.

Refusal and failure to take the test can result in automatic suspension of the driver's license for 90 days, if the arresting officer submits a "refusal" form to the director of the Department of Law Enforcement in Boise. Another reason to take the test is that the driver can then demand his own blood test administered by a doctor. Idaho law gives the driver this right and failure of the police officer to grant the driver this right to his own blood test can result in the dismissal of DWI charges against him.

A third reason to take the test is that juries generally look upon a refusal with suspicion that the dirver knew he was under the influence and didn't want BAC evidence against him.

If the driver takes the MOBAT test, Idaho state law gives him the right to the test results, generally available from the arresting officer or prosecuting attorney's office within two weeks after arrest.

Bicentennial pageant set in Filer

By MARJORIE LIERMAN
Times-News writer

FILER — The Filer Elementary School is getting a head start on observing the United States Bicentennial.

Its students will present a pageant "Our Country 'Tis of Thee" at 7:30 p.m. Monday and Tuesday in the high school gymnasium. Over 200 students of grades four through eight, including junior high chorus, will depict great moments of American history under the direction of Mrs. Claire Theener, school choral director.

Written by Ruth Roberts and William Katz, the pageant is a Freedom Foundation George Washington honor medal winner, and is one of the first, if not the first, bicentennial celebrations to be observed in Magic Valley.

The week of March 17, 1975, has been designated as first "National Music in Our Schools Day" and the group felt presenting the pageant now would be a fitting way to observe it.

The chorus opens the pageant by posing the question "But where did it all begin and who made it possible?" One of the first scenes shows the historic signing of the Declaration of Independence and the Bill of Rights, for which many of the signers were prosecuted the rest of their lives.

Although the pageant tells the story of many famous Americans of the two cen-

MRS. Claire Theener, Filer school choral director, in picture at right, adjusts the 34-star Union flag and Confederacy flag which are being held by Jeanie Kulik and Kathy Elliott in a Civil War scene from the forthcoming school pageant. The bottom picture shows a few of the great men in American History, from left, Doug Stalter, portraying John Smith; Kyle Woodland, Roger Williams; Jeff Aslett, Daniel Boone; Rusty Sharp, Sam Houston, and Jeff Dunlap, Brigham Young. The pageant is set for 7:30 p.m. Monday and Tuesday in the Filer High School Gymnasium.

tories, it deals mainly with "Mr. and Mrs. Nobody in particular," several of the great number of people who help to make up America's great history although their names are never remembered.

As the pageant unfolds, it follows the trek of the pioneers across the Cumberland Gap and on into the great unknown west. One of the most stirring moments of the entire production is "The Unknown Bugle Boy of Cemetery Hill," a spoken ballad about a young bugler in the Civil War, and did he wear blue or grey.

The early settlers, the wagon trains west, the religious leaders, all are shown. Inventors, such as Thomas Edison, are saluted, as the country continued into the Industrial Age. Humorous insights into history are noted during brief glimpses of the gay 1920s with its derby hats, knickers, hootchie-kootchie parlors and cars with rumble seats.

A more somber note is struck as the country enters the Great Depression era with the stock market crash and the New Deal.

During the last part of the pageant, special slides will be shown of prominent presidents and events.

Mrs. Theener said when they first began work on the pageant, she asked a class "What is a bicentennial celebration?" Answers received ranged from "I dunno" to "some kind of race" or "something like the Fourth of July" to "It's about these old guys who have white hair and wear funny looking clothes and stand around a table signing something."

"As the pageant has progressed and the students have delved deeper into their country's history, they have developed a genuine interest and concern about their country and have asked many questions," the teacher said.

"What It Means To Be Great," a song about the Bill of Rights, is sung with great conviction and sincerity by the students, she said.

Pianist for the pageant is Mrs. Roger Vincent, who has donated her time for the practices. Jeff Shaw and Rich Melton, high school students, will play drums and trumpet. Bill Heaps, elementary school principal, will serve as narrator. Gilbert DeKlotz will be in charge of lighting effects.

The number by the chorus "Fifty Nifty States" uses large cardboard replicas of the states which were made by the Teacher Corps personnel. Mrs. Dale Williams is chairman of the costume committee and clothes were made by her committee, assisted by mothers.

Mrs. Theener had thought she would have trouble persuading the older junior high boys to participate and take the part of the early settlers. When she first put the question to them, they nudged each other, shrugged, and each said, in effect, "I will, if you will."

The sixth grade boys who portray John Smith, Roger Williams, Daniel Boone, Sam Houston and Brigham Young volunteered for their parts and each was assigned research into lives of their man to find out when he lived, what kind of person he was, how he looked and what he wore.

Members of the fourth grade will present a dance "With An Empty Jug and A Musical Saw." The junior chorus will perform a routine during "Yankee Doodle Dandy" wearing red, white and blue hats made by Mrs. Donna Brown.

Mrs. Lenore Bruce, Teacher Corps director, will be in charge of slides and film strips. Mrs. Johnny Horner made the investors' pictures, and Mrs. Betty Heingartner made the wigs for the signers of the Independence.

Mrs. Patty Whitehead and Mrs. Barbara Bartlett taught the "Charleston" to the 1920 flappers and answered wide-eyed questions about such things as rumble seats in cars, a person named Barney Google, and if boys really ever wore knickers and girls rolled their stockings down around their ankles.

A small admission charge will go toward expenses and buying musical equipment for the schools.

The social will be held at the Gooding LDS Church. The program will include a style show of early day clothes, antiques display and speakers.

Entertainment will be provided by the members of the Senior Citizens group.

Refreshments will be served. Admission is free and the historical society will have membership cards for sale.

The unlucky expert looked over the dummy quickly. With 22 high-card points, North's seven notrump call was normal. It looked as if every one in the field would be at the same spot.

It also appeared that everyone would have to locate the queen of clubs in order to bring home the contract.

He looked at his opponents. Two typical little old ladies. How could he go wrong against that opposition?

He played the hand quickly while making sure of each play by each defender. He started with diamonds. West showed out on the second diamond and, much to our expert's delight, dropped the three of clubs. The four of clubs came next and then the deuce of hearts.

This was just like taking candy from children. He almost decided to spread his hand and announce a club finesse against East, but that would be showing off. He cashed the hearts and everyone followed. Then he played the last two high spades and the nice lady on his left dropped the five and then the eight. Clearly she was left with two clubs and nine of spades.

He cashed dummy's king of clubs; led the jack and let it ride. Out on the table came the queen of clubs and the nine of spades gave the defense two tricks to add insult to injury.

your health

Dear Dr. Thosteson:

I would appreciate your discussing the possible causes of flatulence. With me it occurs in the later afternoon, before and after our evening meal. I am in good health. — Mrs. A. R.

That's a tall order.

For the sake of discussion, I can list four general causes. When you put them all together, the result can be a veritable symphony of distress and embarrassment.

They are age, eating habits, diet, and disease, but not necessarily in that order of importance.

Age. Oldsters tend to produce less digestive juices and enzymes, and this causes a slackening of stomach activity. As a result, food remains only partially digested, allowing a build-up of gas which is eventually propelled through the bowel.

Eating habits. Two thirds of all gas problems are related to air-swallowing. This air similarly finds its way through gut, following the path of least resistance. People who talk excitedly during meals may encounter this. One study of flatulence revealed that the contents of expelled gas include nitrogen, oxygen, methane, carbon dioxide, and hydrogen. Outside air contains only oxygen and nitrogen. Nitrogen is major constituent of expelled gas, or flatulence.

Diet. Pork and beans is a notable example. Other foods that can cause trouble include vegetables such as cabbage and broccoli, onions, carbonated drinks, highly fermented cheeses, sugary desserts, and some fruits. Also, smoking before meals.

Disease. This can include gall bladder disease, peptic ulcers, or colon disturbances such as colitis or diverticulosis.

I would add a fifth category — anxiety, which can affect the pace of eating and thus the efficiency of the stomach and the lower digestive tract.

Many causes listed

What to do about it? Eat a balanced diet, eat slowly, chew with your lips closed, do not smoke before meals, avoid an excess of the foods I have listed above, especially at lunch (in your specific case), and try to have a bowel movement in the early afternoon.

If none of this helps, then you should be checked for any of the possible physical problems I've mentioned above. Even an allergy can be a factor. Certain foods, milk in particular, could be a cause if there is a deficiency of the enzyme necessary to digest milk sugar — lactase.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:

What would cause me to itch on my arms, stomach and legs? I get welts where it itches. Often, it goes away for a week or two, then returns. — Mrs. C.R.C.

Angioedema (angioneurotic edema) — which is a form of hives — often behaves this way. It is usually caused by an allergy. With some folks food is the most common offender. A drug can also set it off. Foods to watch out for as possible causes are shellfish, nuts, eggs, meat, milk, and onions.

The sensitizing agent may lurk in the gastrointestinal tract, and sometimes a simple cathartic may hasten its removal. An antihistamine can give some relief also.

But any medication beyond this should be avoided for a trial period, since there is a whole catalogue of medicines which have been at one time or another the primary cause of the reaction. Meanwhile, try to avoid scratching.

Instead, apply a soothing lotion such as a calamine preparation. Keep a food diary to try to trace the particular food that may be prompting the periodic attacks. You should avoid stressful situations, since, as the name implies, the problem can be related to your nerves.

I offer these only as suggestions of what might be the cause of your outbreaks. There are so many combinations of skin disturbances and possible causes I sometimes think only a computer could sort them out.

Opera slated

MAKING plans for the Twin Falls appearance of the Western Opera Theatre April 14 and 15 are Martha Mead, Judy Driscoll, seated, and Larry Curtis, all members of the Northwest Opera Association, a local group formed to promote opera production in Magic Valley.

April opera planned for TF

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley residents will be able to see live opera at the CSI Fine Arts Auditorium April 14 and 15.

The Western Opera theatre, the touring arm and educational subsidiary of the San Francisco Opera Co., will appear here for two days of workshops and two nightly performances under auspices of a local opera group.

The group will present "La Traviata" by Verdi April 14 and "The Barber of Seville" by Rossini on April 15. It will be the only performance in Idaho by the opera theatre.

Called the Northwest Opera Association, the Twin Falls group was formed two years ago when rehearsals for "A Hand of Bridge" were under way. Participants decided an organization was needed to promote opera in the area, according to Judy Driscoll, board member.

Last June the group changed its original name from Magic Valley to Northwest Opera and applied for a grant from the Idaho Arts and Humanities Commission so the group could travel with opera production throughout south central Idaho.

The grant was awarded last fall and soon members were told of the availability of the San Francisco group. Because of a second grant from the Western Opera Theatre itself, Mrs. Driscoll said the cost has been cut to where it is "manageable" and will allow for the performers to spend time in schools in Twin Falls.

A public workshop is scheduled April 13, Sunday night, open to all adults interested in drama. On Monday, April 14, the performers will conduct workshops and give a one-act opera at CSI for all area students who can be bused to Twin Falls. On Tuesday, April 15, they will scatter to all Twin Falls schools for individual workshops and appearances.

Thursday meet set

FILER — A newly organized 4-H club with Mrs. Richard Seaman as leader will meet Thursday at the home of Tom Lancaster.

Tawni Blades is president of the club; Dan Seaman, vice-president, and Margaret Lancaster, secretary-treasurer and reporter. A name for the club will be selected in the near future.

Mrs. Seaman, leader, is being assisted by Mrs. Ernest Blades and Ron Brady.

Engagement revealed

RUPERT — Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow W. Benson, Boise, announce the engagement of their daughter, Sarah Jane, to Anthony Lee Saras.

Saras is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Saras, Rupert.

The couple plans a mid-April wedding. They will live in Rupert, where the bridegroom is employed, after their marriage.

Speaker scheduled for TF luncheon

TWIN FALLS — Ben Song, 37, featured speaker at the Magic Valley Christian Women's Club luncheon at noon Thursday is a Korean orphan.

The luncheon will be at the Holiday Inn.

Song will tell the story of his life as an orphan during the Korean conflict. He serves as president of the All Asia Evangelistic Association and executive director of Teen Life, International. His adoption by an American family allowed him to attend school.

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago, I married a kind and gentle man. We were so much in love.

Being newlyweds, the credit cards and offers from loan companies started coming in the mails, left and right.

My husband tried to make me understand that we should put the credit cards away to be used only as credit references, but I was stubborn and greedy and wouldn't listen to him.

Now, two years later, we are up to our ears in debt, being hassled by lawyers who represent merchants and loan companies. They are threatening to repossess our car and furniture.

My husband makes $4.50 an hour, but we are so deep in debt and so far behind in payments that our credit is ruined and we can't even get a pack of cigarettes on credit. We owe more than $5,000.

I've called banks, loan companies and savings and loan associations trying to borrow money to pay off our debts, and they all turned us down because of our bad credit rating.

It's not hopeless

Am I working? No. I have no special skills. Besides I'm black, a woman and weigh 335. I don't mind hard work, but when I apply for a job, they look at me like King Kong just came in.

Please help me, Abby. Things have never looked so hopeless.

DESPERATE

DEAR DESPERATE: Each payday pay SOMETHING — no matter how little — to each creditor. That will show your good faith, and restore your credit in time. (Consistently ignoring your creditors only damages your credit rating more.)

Overeaters Anonymous has the solution for your weight problem, but, like Alcoholics Anonymous, you have to go to them. The longest march in the world started with one step, so get going, good luck, and God bless you.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 38-year-old woman who recently won a six-month cruise around the world. My husband is in prison. In the meantime, I've become interested in another man. My husband is not aware of this other man, and the other man doesn't know that I have a husband.

The other man has asked me if he could join me on the cruise. I would enjoy having his company, but I would feel that I was being unfaithful to my husband.

What do you think?

TROUBLED

DEAR TROUBLED: I think you're already in deep water. If you want to travel, travel alone.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 64-year-old widower. I had a very good 33-year marriage with my one and only wife. I met a woman a few months ago, and we became very much attracted to each other. She is 44, and we are talking marriage, but there is something in the back of my mind that bothers me.

This woman has been married three times before. She was divorced from her first husband, and her second and third committed suicide. I have a feeling that if she couldn't make a success of three marriages there must be something wrong with her.

What do you think?

HAVING DOUBTS

DEAR HAVING: Don't jump to any conclusions. Get to know her better, and judge her for yourself.

DEAR ABBY: Have you ever received a chain letter telling you that if you "break the chain," you will have bad luck? And if you have, what have you done about it?

JUST GOT ONE

DEAR JUST: I have received many, and they all end up in the nearest waste basket. Not only are they against the law, they are a lot of superstitious trash. If you feel that you want to "do" something about it, turn it over to the postmaster at your nearest Post Office, and he will take it from there.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20¢) envelope.

TV system purchased

BUHL — Purchase of the cable television system in Hazelton by the Buhl Cable TV Co., was announced Friday by Wayne Moberg, manager of the Buhl firm.

The Buhl company took over operations as of March 1, Moberg said.

"We will continue to operate the Hazelton system as it is until we complete a survey of existing equipment and services. At that time we will make whatever improvements we can," Moberg said.

He estimated about half of the homes in Hazelton are connected to the cable. It was recently extended into the new housing area adjacent to town.

Mel Preckle, Jerome, is the former owner of the concern. Service information is available from the Buhl office, 543-6300.

TF man 'fair'

TWIN FALLS — Jerry Lee Young, 25, Twin Falls, was listed in fair condition Saturday after his vehicle overturned at the intersection of Blue Lakes Boulevard North and Filer Avenue.

The accident occurred at 1:02 a.m. Saturday, State Patrolman Harold Ingram said. Ingram said he was following a block or two behind Young and had observed him cutting in and out of traffic.

The officer said the driver apparently attempted to stop for a light change at the corner but was unable to stop and slid into the curb broadside, turning the vehicle over.

A light rain was falling at the time, he said. Young was alone in the vehicle and unconscious when taken to Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

Malta man confirmed

BOISE — The Senate State Affairs Committee recommended the confirmation of a Malta man to the Water Resources Board Friday.

Edwin Schlender, Malta, was recommended for confirmation by the committee along with George Yost, Emmett, and Reed Hansen, Idaho Falls.

The confirmation of Coeur d'Alene attorney Scott Reed was sent to the floor by the committee without recommendation.

Contract let for NRA headquarters

TWIN FALLS — A contract for construction of the Sawtooth National Recreation Area visitor information and headquarters building near Ketchum has been awarded to an Idaho Falls contractor.

E. A. Fournier, supervisor of the Sawtooth National Forest, said Friday the contract for $455,327 was awarded Hunter-Saucerman Construction Co. Inc. It will provide a new 12,000 square-foot building located at the southern entrance of the SNRA. The site is near the confluence of the Big Wood and North Fork of Wood River, about seven miles north of Ketchum adjacent to US Highway 93.

Some residents of the Wood River Valley voiced objection to building on this site because of fragile but lush vegetation on the 60-acre building site. The group asked the building be located further north in an open area, leaving the 60 acres intact and in natural form.

Fournier said the building is designed to harmonize with architectural themes of other buildings in the upper Wood River Valley.

He said since the 754,000-acre Sawtooth National Recreation Area was created in 1972, the forst service has sought and gained public involvement in the building site selection. Land use planning public meetings were held in several major Idaho cities and in other communities near SNRA, Fournier said.

During 1972 and 1973 the site selection and need for the building were discussed with local and state officials as well as interested organizations and groups, the forst supervisor said.

The site was determined the most satisfactory, he said, because more than half of the SNRA summer recreation visitors and the majority of winter visitors pas by the Southern entrance.

"In our plans we have made every effort to minimize conflicts with scenery and environment," he said.

"The site will provide convenient access on and off US Highway 93 for those visiting the SNRA. During 1974, nearly one million people visited the Sawtooth NRA," he added.

The building plans call for a visitor information center where the public may obtain information about recreational opportunities in the SNRA. This will be located on the first floor with SNRA headquarters offices on the second floor.

Fournier said the building is expected to be ready for occupancy during the spring of 1976.

Awards given

IDAHO'S outstanding young men by Jaycee standards received awards Saturday during the annual state Jaycee convention here. Included were Ronald Pierce, Buhl, farmer award, and Willard Sullivan, Emmett, outstanding young man, seated, and Boyd Webster, Rexburg, top farmer award; Randall B. Folles, Boise, outstanding young man; and Charles D. Lein, Boise, top educator, standing, all from left.

Meet set on Silver creek

SHOSHONE — An open meeting to inform area residents about the Silver Creek Aquafer Basin study will be held Monday at 8 p.m. ath the Lincoln County Courthouse.

A panel session will be followed by a question and answer period. The panel will explore the ramifications of the flow of Silver Creek and its effect on the fishery and water users of Silver Creek and Little Wood River.

The area is bounded on the north by Bellevue, on the east and west by lowline foothills and on the south by the Picabo and Timmerman Hills areas, forming a triangle.

Residents there are concerned about the flow and water quality of Silver Creek which rises from spring in the triangle may be deteriorating.

Recent changes in land use and irrigation methods may be the potential causes. The Wood River resource Conservation and Development Council will coordinate the study locally and the Department of Water Resources will give technical assistance at the state level.

Gooding mayor ouster sought

Conflicts about the city's airport, police department, the city and rural fire departments, and subdivision restrictions were all mentioned by various persons as reasons for recalling Mayor Rice.

City officials and department chiefs are "being run by him (Rice) and they can't sneeze without him knowing it," one Gooding resident said, adding, "No one is happy with city government."

Virginia Hastings, one of the women who plan to circulate the petitions, said the petition may be changed to request Rice's resignation.

She said many state employes feel they can't sign the petition and city workers say they'll lose their jobs if they sign.

Mrs. Hastings said she is generally disatisfied with the way the city government is run and she believes other Gooding residents are, also.

Six young men honored at Idaho Jaycees meet

BY BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Six young men were honored Saturday by the Idaho Jaycees for their outstanding contributions to their communities and the Jaycee organization.

Three men were selected for the title of Outstanding Young men of Idaho in 1974. These included Randall B. Folles, Boise, Willard (Mike) Sullivan, Emmett, and R. Jim Ries, Cascade.

Honored as the outstanding young educator was Charles D. Lein, Boise State University, and two outstanding young farmer awards were given. First place honors went to Boyd Webster, Resburg, and second to Ronald Pierce, Buhl.

About 150 Jaycees and Jaycettes from throughout Idaho met in Twin Falls Friday evening and Saturday for the annual convention.

National Jaycee president, David Hale, Spring Creek, Ark., addressed the Saturday luncheon following announcement of award winners.

He stressed leadership as the single most important need in the world today, and said Jaycees build leadership. He said there are three prerequisites to success in leadership. First, he said is a positive attitude. The second item is courage — inward courage to relate to fellow men, and third, a strong commitment.

Hale cited the commitment of the men who signed the Declaration of Independence and staked their lives on achieving that independence.

The national president challenged the Idaho Jaycees to commit themselves to meeting he leadership needs in their own areas.

"There is a need for young people in America to achieve needed changes. And what better place is there for this young leadership than from the Jaycee organization?" he asked.

Convention sessions began Friday with an executive board meeting with reports on the past year's activities from 11 district presidents. A board of directors meeting was held at 9 a.m. Saturday with group planning summary reports and talks by national directors from the various regions.

Delegates traveled to Jackpot Saturday night for dinner and entertainment. All other sessions were held in the Holiday Inn, Twin Falls.

Confab set

BELLEVUE — Boise, developer, Bart Ballantine will show and tell area residents what he expects to do with his 2,000-acre development south of Bellevue in a meeting Monday at 8 p.m. in the Bellevue School.

Ballantine has proposed development on both sides of US Highway 93 about two miles south of here. He has changed plans considerably since he first encountered Blaine County governing bodies.

Stephen Boller, former Blaine County prosecuting attorney, who represents Ballantine, and the meeting is an informal gathering to show residents of the area the proposed developments.

Gem inmates send protest

BOISE (UPI) — Inmates at Idaho State Prison have sent a letter to Gov. Cecil Andrus protesting their treatment at the institution and demanding the firing of the board of corrections.

The letter to the governor charged "the entire state board of corrections and its members with neglect and malfeasance."

The prisoners also asked the governor for his protection against the board and its employes "from taking reprisals for the filing of this coomplaint, in so much as none the inmates who signed this complaint be placed in maximum security, nor any inmate transferrred to another institution, nor any inmate be passed over or denied any consideration for a parole application."

Andrus said Friday he had not received the petition "and until I do I cannot respond. If I don't receive it by Monday, I will go looking for it."

Allegations by the board include that it has failed to provide adequate clothing for the inmates working outside in the rain or snow; that the board has neglected to follow the standards set by the American Correctional Association; and that the board has allowed the theft by staff members of inmates personal property — watches, rings and other items — purchased through the inmate commissary.

They contend that the board has failed to provide the inmates with the required inmate rule book.

Other allegations include:

— that the board has failed to provide any hearings as required by the Idaho code for the revocation of the inmates good time and instead allowed the adjustment committee to take at random any amount of good time from any inmate for any rule infraction.

— The board has allowed the Idaho commission for Pardons and Paroles members to deny without cause "any inmates application for parole consideration, and has not followed the policy established for the annual review of an inmates record."

No plans for Bald mountain

HAILEY — Sun Valley Co. has no immediate plans to develop Bald Mountain into the Cold Springs area, according to Forest Ranger Tom Farr.

Farr, speaking as a representative to the Blaine Council of Governments Thursday night, said Sun Valley has not proposed entry into the Colds Springs area in at least the next two to five years.

Cold Springs is a small community about two miles south of Ketchum. Sun Valley Co. has been thinking for some time of expanding skiing facilities further south on Bald Mountain to accommodate more skiers.

Farr said the US Forest Service and Sun Valley Co. have entered into an agreement with a Boise firm to do a social economic study of the Wood River region.

He said the firm was study the effects of expansion on the economic, social and environmental elements in the area.

Farr adamantely told the council the forest services has not told Sun Valley Co. they will be able to expand. He said the forest service will not be able to tell them either "yes" or "no" until the study is completed and findings analiyzed.

Sun Valley Co. has not budgeted to develop Cold Springs or Frenchmen's Gulch west of the Warm Springs ski run, Farr said.

"We think Frenchman's Gulch is going to be a disaster."

Farr said the possibility of rounding a good bowl in the area is nearly impossible; there is a great potential for avalanche and borrowing from an already steep slope to develop the area would increase the avalanche potential.

Sun Valley Co in the future will replace the old chairlift up Exhibition Run, Farr said. Sun Valley Co., he said, is thinking of building one lift to the top of the mountain, bypassing the Roundhouse.

Parking facilities at River Run are crowded now, he said, and the parking area will have to be increased.

Reynolds said forest service plans call for all development near the designated SNRA city to be located on the west side of US Highway 93.

Whisper poetry, not shout, poetess says

BY GEORGE WILEY
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Poetry, poetess Diane Wakoski told a CSI audience Friday, is like a secret, to be whispered and not shouted.

Ms. Wakoski, who has published several volumes of poetry, held a poetry workshop and reading at the college Friday as part of the Women in the Arts day of "Women's Awareness Week."

A professor of poetry at the University of Southern Califnia, Ms. Wakoski spoke briefly on the historical roots of the prose poem, and in comparing the poem to prose said that the presentation of the emotion was what made the poem, more than simply technical excellence. The poem, unlike prose, did not necessarily attempt to tell the story, she said.

She advised people who want to publish their poems to forsake the small, short-lived periodicals which don't pay and to submit their poems instead to established magazines and to keep submitting poems to those magazines until they are accepted.

The reputable magazines, she said, not only publish good poetry but are always looking for new poets.

At a reading Friday evening Ms. Wakoski presented about ten of her own poems; both the poems and her reading coming in a simple, unaffected style.

In a poem call "Thanking My Mother for Piano Lessons," she spoke of "a desire to love a loveless world."

"I played my way from age to age," she read, "but they all seemed ageless."

At the end, however, despite not having played the piano for ten years, she was affirmative:

"When I touch the man I love, I want to thank my mother for giving me piano lessons all those years."

In other poems she spoke of the will to fight for one's rights to life and labeled Sylvia Plath and other poetesses, poets and non-poets who had chosen suicide "cowards."

Sometimes Ms. Wakoski spoke of herself as "dull" but with unaffected images she sought to achieve her stated aim of "transcending my own autobiography to arrive at a personal mythology."

Or, as she read: "Living here / in this rough country that I do/ building my house."

Panel on divorce, widowhood closes Women's Awareness week in TF

BY GEORGE WILEY
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Panel discussions on divorce and widowhood Saturday closed out the seminars held during "Women's Awareness Week."

A yoga workshop to be held from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. today at the CSI gymnasium will conclude the week of activities which examined women's roles and problems in the society and the current movement for equal rights for women under the law.

The panels on the divorced woman and the widow were held Saturday morning at the YWCA.

Panelists discussing widowhood included Twin Falls attorney William Langley, Betty Burrell, widow and president of the Twin Falls Seven-Up Bottling Co., mortician Paul Reynolds, and George Pauls, a member of the Widow to Widower Organization.

Panelists discussing divorces were Boise caseworker Carl Dodson, Burley attorney Pete K. (Kent) Church, and Parents Without Partners member Mary Lou Walcott.

After noting that women are often the plaintiffs in divorce actions and that often they must pay the costs of divorce, Church, nonetheless, advised that the services of an attorney be sought.

While it is legal to file one's own complaints, and handle one's own divorce in the courts, Church said, amateur attorneys often create more problems than they solve.

KENT CHURCH
"Divorce Ain't Neat"

"I would not recommend that you do it yourself," Church said, ". . . the ramifications of self-help divorces can be horrendous if they are not properly drawn . . . If you know what you are doing, you can probably to a whale of a job."

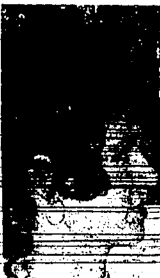
Asked how much time he personally spent on the average divorce cases, Church said that he spent about two or three hours, but he added that overhead costs for secretaries, office space and materials, averaging for his firm about $1,000 per month, off-set much of the seemingly grand $150 fee for a divorce.

Responding to questions about child support, Church noted that legally child support, although paid to the mother, belongs to the children and is uniformly levied by the court whether the mother seeks it or not.

He advised the audience composed largely of divorced women to remember that the support money legally belonged to the children before they let pride discourage them for seeking the money form their former husbands.

Karen Prince, YWCA director, raised the question of financial credit.

Divorced women, she said, even though they may have been the financial managers during a marrage find after divorce the utility bills, back accounts and other accounts have been in the name of the husband, and the woman often has trouble establishing financial credit for herself and has to make deposits with utility companies and has difficulty obtaining credit cards, even though the credit rating of the former family was unmarred.



CONNIE BRADLEY
. . . "You Can Go On"

Mrs. Prince advised women facing credit difficulties to persist and to indicate that legal action might be taken if credit could not be obtained.

Another participant, Connie Bradley, outlined the grieving process that often surrounds divorce. She linkened the feelings of denial, anger and guilt which follow divorce to those surrounding the death of a family member.

She advised divorced women to recognize their feelings and to communicate them to friends.

"You can go on," she said.

"With kids, at least, divorce ain't neat," attorney Church said.

In his experience, he said, the "two main causes (of divorce) are communication and a good sexual relationship . . . Everything else can be swept under the carpet if they have that."

Men, Church said, look upon divorced women with more respect than they do with their own wives. "It's a whole lot easier be a chauvinist."

He advised against storing up resentment during a marriage, to get resentments out in the open.

"Women's Awareness Week," which began Monday, was co-sponsored by the YWCA and the College of Southern Idaho Student Affairs Committee.

Scattered showers to continue

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert and northside areas: Scattered showers late today through Monday. Highs both days mid 40s to low 50s. Lows tonight mid 20s to low 30s. Precipitation probability 50 per cent this afternoon decreasing to 40 per cent later tonight.

Camas Prairie, Hailey, lower Wood River Valley areas: Chance of scattered showers of rain or snow through Monday. Highs both days about 40. Lows tonight in the teens.

Synopsis: A large area of low pressure centered off the west coast has been producing a series of disturbances which have been moving inland with some weakening for the past few days. These disturbances have produced areas of rain or showers over much of the Western states, especially over the south west. A frontal system which moved out of this low pressure and across Idaho Saturday produced measureable precipitation over many locations in Idaho Friday night and Saturday. The main low pressure area along the west coast began moving eastward Saturday night and will continue across Idaho today, continuing the chance of showers.

Sugar declines slightly; wheat loses early strength

Courtesy Sinclair & Co.

CHICAGO — With nothing concrete materializing from Friday's EEC tender, the world sugar market fell under considerable downward pressure and ended the day with moderate losses.

Futures declined 115 to 75 points, but stoood above weakest levels. Overall dealings totaled 3434 contracts.

Traders clearly termed the EEC tender as disappointing. There were unconfirmed rumors, however, that no subsidy had been granted for Italy, but a subsidy for 51,000 tons was granted to Britain under the IMEX scheme.

The world spot price declined 100 points Friday on tone, and was fixed at $26.50 cents per pound, FOB Caribbean ports. The two domestic spots also fell 100 points and stood at 28.50, duty paid.

Sugar 10 futures also dropped 60 to 110 points after 65 trades, while sugar 12 prices were 160 to 50 points lower on a total volume of 18 contracts.

In wheat futures, there was enough early speculative buying to accomodate good-sized commercial offerings and record 3 to 4 cent gains.

These levels held for a short time, but a weakening in corn and soybeans, and additional commercial wheat offerings triggered speculative selling. Prices softened and fluctuated in the lower areas before closing 8 to 11 cents below Thursday's settlement price.

Chicago cash wheat basis nominally steady at May price for hard winter and 4 cents under May for soft red. Gulf basis 1 cent higher, 32 cents over KC May.

Live cattle futures notched a 30 cents gain in the spot month while the back months suffered modest declines.

Reports of better late week demand in view of slightly curtailed receipts apparently fueled the nearby strength while weakness in the feed grains and uncertainty about new grading regulations dampened enthusiasm in the deferred contracts.

Cattle volume totalled a brisk 7,500 trades.

Brokers viewed the removal of the USDA prior approval requirement for grains, soybeans and soybean meal exports as particularly welcome by the corn trade.

Some had expected that this requirement would still hold for corn after it has been lifted for other grains. The projection by the USDA Thursday that the USSR might need 500,000 tons of U.S. corn was seen as a further encouragement for the long side of corn.

The close saw 3 to 7½ cent losses for the day. The most important general concern in the market after the early break seemed to be the trade ideas of possible large scale country selling over the weekend. The recent erratic market action was seen encouraging farmers to take what gains they had from the week's net price increases. Some thought that seasonal factors might have a bearing on this decision.

Reports of fresh European interest in soybeans and products, and Thursday's announcement of lifting of the USDA requirement for prior approval for export grain sales, gave soybeans and soybean oil futures an additional shot of strength Friday morning.

Bank of America offers $500 million to Russia

© New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Because Export-Import Bank loans to the Soviet Union have been restricted, the Bank of America has offered to form a banking syndicate to lend $500 million to the Russians to finance imports from the United States.

The proposal was suggested by A.W. Clausen, president of the bank, the world's largest, at a Feb. 20 meeting of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. Trade and Economic Council in Washington, a spokesman for the bank confirmed Thursday.

If the credit arrangement is established, it would play a major role in financing trade with the Soviet Union. In 1974 exports from the U.S. to the Soviet Union totaled $602 million.

The terms of the credit have not been determined, a Bank of America spokesman said. Exports to the Soviet Union financed through the federal government's Export Import Bank — now limited to $300 million a year — carry an interest rate of 7 per cent. Presumably the rate on the Bank of America credit would be somewhat higher.

In confirming the proposals, the Bank of America said the establishment of such a credit facility would tend to counteract the recession in the United States economy, improve this country's balance of international payments and help banks make additional loans for productive purposes at a time when an increase in United States production is needed."

If the Soviet Union approves the proposal, the Bank of America would organize a syndicate of banks to share the $500 million credit. So far, however, the proposal has not been discussed with other banks, the spokesman for the Bank of America said.

In a recent interview with the New York correspondent of Izvestia, the Soviet government newspaper, Vladimir S. Alkhimov, a deputy minister of foreign trade, said the Soviet Union had "no objections" to the use of commercial bank credit to finance trade between the two countries.

According to William Hurst, vice president, the Russians expressed a keen interest in the proposal.

Hurst stressed that the proposal was just a suggestion that is intended to permit the Soviets to use Export-Import Bank credits for long-term financing and use the revolving credit arrangement to purchase American wheat and consumer products.

The Bank of America executive said that William E. Simon, secretary of the treasury, is expected to receive word from the Russians about the credit plan when he visits Moscow in April to discuss trade between the two countries.

The Bank of America, which had resources of $60 billion at the end of 1974, opened a representative office in Moscow in November, 1973. In September of that year it headed a group of 10 banks that provided $180 million of credit to the U.S.S.R.

House tax chief eyes energy bill

© New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Rep. Al Ullman, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, said Thursday that he expected the House to pass by April 30 a major energy bill that includes a gasoline tax, gradual decontrol of crude oil prices, a windfall profits tax on oil producers and "a very flexible quota on imports geared to the economy."

Ullman, who has been in close touch with Federal Energy Administrator Frank G. Zarb, predicted in a telephone interview that House passage by the end of April would cause President Ford to defer again the imposition of the second and third dollars of a fee on imported crude oil.

Such a delay would give the Senate time to consider a House-passed bill. After that, both chambers undoubtedly would need a legislative conference to resolve differences.

The first dollar of the import fee went into effect by executive action on Feb. 1.

On Tuesday, Ford deferred the balance for 60 days as part of a new effort by the Republican administration and Democratic Congress to substitute cooperation for confrontation in the shaping of a national energy policy.

The views of Ullman and his committee are considered more likely to determine the contents of an energy bill than are the milder proposals made last week by an AD ad hoc group of Democrats led by Sen. John O. Pastore of Rhode Island and Rep. James C. Wright of Texas. Ullman and some House committee chairmen with whom he was formed an alliance have the responsibility to send legislation to the floor. The Pastore-Wright group composed differences under a general statement of principles and in any case has no continuing existence.

Other parts of a broad-gage energy bill, Ullman said, might include measures to help electric utilities raise expansion capital, creation of an energy trust fund, authority for the government to become the country's exclusive purchaser of foreign oil, incentives for conversion of oil-burning plants to coal, federal assistance for home owners who buy storm windows or insulation and possibly deregulation, outright or partial, of natural gas prices.

Ullman, D-Ore., conceded that House passage of all of that by May would be a prodigious feat, one that would require a "very heavy timetable" for the legislative committees and the House as a body.

For that reason, and because nearly all provisions are controversial, there is speculation on Capitol Hill, that a shorter version of the bill is more likely to go to the Senate, possibly confined to a windfall profits tax, gasoline tax, quota authority and financial aid to home owners.

These four would be areas on which Congress and the administration could reach agreement, especially if the quota provision gives the President discretionary authority and doesn't require a limit on the volume of The administration is philosophically opposed to using that technique to shrink imports. Officials say a quota means shortages and activation of the fuel allocation system. Zarb, for one, repeatedly has told Congress that he feels the government should not seek the responsibility for deciding which industries get more fuel and which less.

ITT hikes pensions

NEW YORK -- International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation Friday announced it has increased pension benefits for its more than 5,000 retired employees and beneficiaries to help offset the impact of inflation on their fixed incomes.

The increases, effective Jan. 1, vary for each pensioner, depending upon retirement date and amount of pension. The average increase amounted to approximately 12 per cent of current pension payments to former salaried employees covered under ITT retirement plans in the United States and Canada.

A spokesman for the company said that while periodic increases in Social Security have offset the impact of inflation to a limited extent, ITT recognized the burden faced by its pensioners and acted to help ease this problem.

Social Security advisors warn nosedive in funds

1975 Washington Star

WASHINGTON — The Social Security Advisory Council warned Congress Friday that without massive transfusions of cash, the system's reserves will plummet from the present level of $43.4 billion to only $800 million by 1880.

The council, composed of 13 private citizens with expertise in various aspects of Social Security, recommended that for the first time in its history that the government appropriate funds to help keep the system liquid. It now relies entirely on revenues from the payroll tax paid by employers and employes.

The council urged appropriation of $7 billion in fiscal 1976 starting July 1. It said the projected deficit for the year far exceeds estimates made a year ago by staff experts. The system has been falling out of balance because of the fact that more people are reaching retirement age, while fewer are entering the work force. The system's most immediate difficulties, however, stem from the nation's general financial ills — a combination of high unemployment and double digit inflation.

Thus, the council believes, while fewer people are working and paying the taxes which support Social Security, the actual level of benefits being paid to millions of men and women is automatically going up at an unprecedented rate.

The council's proposed remedy is to inject funds derived from other taxes, primarily regular income tax. That solution appears sure to raise opposition, both in Congress and at the White House, from those who argue that the Social Security system should continue as a self sustaining operation.

In a statement Friday, Health, Welfare and Education Secretary Casper Winberg, whose department presides over Social Security, said he opposed the council's recommendation for the substantial amounts of general revenue financing into Social Security.

"I think such a step would be inappropriate for a program whose strength has depended so heavily on support by working people and their employers. We should find other ways to solve the financing problem in Social Security," Weinberger said.

Opponents of the council's proposal, including a minority of the council's own members, argue that the deficit also could be met by a hefty increase in the payroll tax.

In that case, the extra burden would fall hardest on the middle-to-upper-income wage earner.

Several weeks ago, the council narrowly rejected a proposal to increase the maximum earnings upon which wage earners pay Social Security taxes from $14,100 to $24,000.

In that case, the extra burden would fall hardest on the middle-to-upper-income wage earner.

Several weeks ago, the council narrowly rejected a proposal to increase the maximum earnings upon which wage earners pay Social Security taxes from $14,100 to $24,000.

The council apparently felt that the proposed increase in the taxable earnings earnings base would make the payroll tax too similar to a graduated income tax.

The over-all social security system is expected to collect $67 billion in taxes this year.

Computer billing due

SHOSHONE — Ranchers who graze their livestock on Bureau of Land Management range this spring will be billed by computer for the first time.

William L. Mathews, BLM Idaho state director, said today that the bureau is changing to an automated billing system for livestock grazing.

According to Mathews, the new system will eliminate some of the paperwork involved and make it easier for the livestock operators to apply for their use.

Livestock operators are normally billed 30 days in advance of the date they turn their cattle out onto the public range. However, the first billing under this new system may be a couple of weeks late, affecting only those operators who move their livestock in April. The rest of the billings will be sent out as in the past.

Other states affected during the 1975 grazing season will be Arizona, California, Nevada, New Mexico and Utah. The remaining public land states will change to the new system for the 1976 grazing season.

Snake snow packs still below normal

BURLEY — Snow packs providing water for Upper Snake River storage reservoirs remain slightly below normal as of March 1, the Bureau of Reclamation office here reports.

Heavy February precipitation brought the watershed from 80 per cent of normal at the beginning of the month to 93 per cent for March 1.

Officials said indications are there will be adequate water for the 1975 irrigation season in spite of the 7 per cent below normal situation at this time.

Jackson Lake and Palisades will be involved in flood control operations this year and all Upper Snake River reservoirs are expected to fill.

Additional water will be released late this month from Palisades to provide storage for flood control measures. During this period the flow in the Heise area of the Snake River will be about four times what it is at this time.

Storage as of March 1 in the various reservoirs include Island Park, 115,600 acre feet; Jackson Lake, 625,300 acre feet; Palisades, 967,000 acre feet; American Falls, 1.06 million acre feet, and Walcott, 60,200 acre feet.

Water passing Milner Dam as of March 10 will be about 5,000 cubic feet per second, and after March 14, the flow will increase to an average of about 8,000 c.f.s.

Flows of this magnitude will provide a spectacular sight at Shoshone Falls. The flows over the falls will be somewhat larger in early April.

5,000 hungry refugees cram Cambodian hotel

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — The refugee children — at the Cambodiana Hotel are lucky. They get a bowl of soup six days a week. The adults don't get anything.

Social workers at the makeshift refugee camp in the hotel hope to get some of America's airlifted rice for the hungry — but they haven't seen any yet.

The Cambodiana is one of the anomalies of war — a luxury hotel not quite finished when the Cambodian conflict began nearly five years ago. Five thousand refugees now cram the first two floors.

Miss Chan Cineurm, a social worker for the Catholic Relief Services, has a simple wish — she doesn't want "her" refugees at the Cambodiana to starve to death.

"The situation is getting worse daily," she said. "If the airport falls to rebel forces, people will starve because there will be no more food."

Six days a week, the children line up, clutch their blue ration cards and hold out pots for bean and vegetable soup. On three days, there's an extra treat — tiny bowls of rice.

On the seventh day, they don't eat.

"The adults have to take care of themselves," Miss Chan said.

As a visitor walks through the Cambodiana, eyes follow him. But the people themselves — apart from a few bold children — stay in cubicles assigned them, sitting on hard wooden beds or rough concrete floor.

Rep. Millicent Fenwick, R-N.J., a member of the U.S. congressional delegation that visited Cambodia last week, said the Cambodiana stunned her.

"You read about places like this, in India or somewhere," she said. "But you really can't imagine the hunger, the poverty."

No one can do anything about the poverty, as long as the war goes on.

But Miss Chan hopes someone — perhaps the Americans who help control the distribution of airlifted rice — can do something about the hunger.

The United States has been flying hundreds of tons of rice into besieged Phnom Penh each day since beginning a massive, round-the-clock airlift last week.

Popular parks to close to visitors

© Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — The National Park Service has decided it no longer can provide adequate protection for all of the national parks and recreation areas and that it probably will have to close portions of some to the public this summer.

Park service officials, in testimony before a congressional appropriations subcommittee and in interviews, said severe budget restrictions have left the parks critically short of rangers and other park employees. Without enough rangers and maintenance workers, parks cannot be operated safely. To keep them open without adequate protection, they said, would violate a mandate from Congress to maintain the parks in an unimpaired condition for the use of future generations as well as those of today.

Park service director Gary E. Everhardt told the House Interior Appropriations Subcommittee at hearings that a large number of park resources — campgrounds, roads and backcountry trails — are in disrepair due to a shortage of maintenance funds and manpower. The situation threatens to get worse, he said, and unless an additional $50 million to $60 million above the park service budget is soon made available, "we stand to lose a lot of our facilities."

The Ford administration's budget request for the park service for the 1976 fiscal year beginning June 30 is 346.0 million, an increase of $3.7 million over the fiscal 1975 budget. But more than $20 million of that sum is allocated for activities to mark the nation's bicentennial, with most of the money coming from other park functions.

William C. Quick, the park service's chief budget officer, said in an interview that the park service has suffered a $19-million loss in buying power due to inflation since 1973, despite budget increases. What money is available for maintaining and operating the parks, he said, has been stretched even thinner due to the rapid expansion of the park system in recent years.

Although the present number of park service employees is at a level 15 per cent below that authorized by Congress, the agency must trim its work force still further to comply with orders from the White House Office of Management and Budget (OMB). The OMB has imposed a hiring freeze and a tight ceiling on the size of the work force that requires the park service to reduce its employee level by about 350 workers by June 30.

Tasaday tribe increases

MANILA (UPI) — Another child has been born to the tiny stoneage Tasaday tribe, the third birth since the "gentle people" were discovered in a southern Philippines rain forest in 1971.

The Panamin Foundation, which protects cultural minorities in the Philippines, said today the baby, a boy, was born in December and brought the number of Tasaday to 29.

A hunter who reported the birth said the boy was the sixth child of Bilut and Bilangan, parents of the tribe's largest family.

Auto 'frills' removed

DETROIT (UPI) — The automobile industry is stripping its cars of frills, but some observers fear they may get caught by a suspicious public.

Top auto executives admit their cars may be carrying too many frills as standard equipment. They've been busy removing some of that equipment on small cars to keep interest in new cars from waning now that cash rebates have ended.

The Ford Motor Co. stepped up the car-stripping Thursday by taking hood ornaments and color-keyed seat belts off its standard-sized Ford LTD. The action, the first of its kind involving larger models which had not been eligible for rebates, will price the car $424 cheaper than any full-sized car now generally offered by the No. 2 auto company.

But Ford also said it would offer its full-size Custom 500, now available only to fleet purchasers, to the public for 30 days.

With a base price of $4,228, it will be the lowest-priced fullsize car on the market — $57 below the lowest-priced Chevrolet.

Death feels 'good'

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — A Chicago doctor says science has found a strange answer to one of man's most ancient questions: What does death feel like?

Those who have been there — or close — say it feels good.

Death is "a feeling of peace and wholeness," according to patients who have been declared medically dead but "revived" by the use of sophisticated medical skills only available in recent years, Dr. Elisabeth Kuebler-Ross said Thursday.

"Not one of them has ever been afraid to die again," she said.

Dr. Ross, an M.D. and psychiatrist and specialist in the problems of the dying, said she had studied the reactions of "several hundred patients ... who have been declared medically dead and come back, to see if they could share what they experienced, or if they experienced anything."

"We came to fantastic findings, terribly intriguing," she said in an interview at a medical seminar at the University of Arizona college of nursing.

Such patients "can describe in minute detail what they experience," she said, and how they "float out of their body

Posse recaptures wandering aoudad

AURORA, Ill. (UPI) — A 10-man posse finally rounded up a shaggy, bearded escapee from the children's zoo at Phillips Park.

After a mile chase, the posse apprehended the fugitive on a golf course near the park Thursday — a day after the break.

The animal was an aoudad. Aoudads, sometimes called Barbary sheep, hail from North Africa and can jump as high as 5 feet, zoo officials said.

This one escaped from a special pen at the zoo Wednesday by jumping through a wire screen. She had been taken from her regular pen in preparation for a hoof trim.

Police said a woman walking her dog spotted the aoudad in a field early Thursday. The posse went after her, found her on a golf course, and ran her to the ground.

Knicks top Piston

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bill Bradley scored 32 points Saturday night in leading the tail-spinning New York Knicks to a 118-100 victory over the even faster-fading Detroit Pistons.

Dave Bing led the Pistons with 26 points to become the 18th NBA player to score more than 15,000 career points.

Bradley's output equalled his season high while center John Gianelli scored 20 points, a season best for him. Harthorne Wingo finished with 18 points, just one below his high for the season, as the Knicks ran wild over the Pistons.

Frosh sets record

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Tennessee freshman Bernard King scored 33 points Saturday night to set a new Vol single season record and lead Tennessee to a 95-74 victory over Georgia.

King, in a head-to-head duel for the Southeastern Conference scoring lead with Georgia freshman Jacky Dorsey, got off to a slow start but then caught fire and pumped in 17 points in the first half.

He retired from the game with 3½ minutes left and left it up to Dorsey to catch him. Dorsey wound up with 26 points for the night, 12 in the first half and 14 in the second.

Ernie Grunfeld had 18 points for the Vols and Rodney Woods and Austin Clark 12 each.

Bullets win 50th

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Phil Chenier scored 28 points to lead the Washington Bullets to their 50th win of the year, 113-92 over the Philadelphia 76ers Saturday night.

Chenier scored 17 points in the first half as the Bullets broke open a game in which the lead had changed hands six times in the first quarter.

Washington led at the half 55-47 and stretched their lead to 86-68 on the ouside shooting of Mike Riordan, who scored 24 points on the night.

Philadelphia, now 29-39, was led in scoring by Fred Carter with 25 points.

Purdue stays alive

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — Walter Jordan and Wayne Walls led the scoring assault and Bruce Parkinson set a Purdue assist record with 18 Saturday to lead the Boilermakers to a 100-72 win over Big Ten foe Minnesota, keeping the Boilermakers' postseason playoff hopes alive.

Purdue pulled into a tie with Minnesota in the Big Ten standings with an 11-7 record at season's end and both teams could wind up in a three or four-team second place tie.

Jordan scored 22 points and Walls 18 as Purdue broke away from a 45-38 lead early in the second half.

Spartans cop second

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Michigan, led by Steve Grote with 25 points and C.J. Kupec with 20, clinched second place in the Big Ten Saturday night with an easy 83-64 victory over Ohio State.

The Wolverines, who finished the regular season with a 19-7 record and a 12-6 Big Ten mark, took command midway through the first half. After a seesaw first few minutes, Michigan went ahead 16-15 on a basket by Joe Johnson and then ran off 11 straight points for a 30-19 lead.

Marquette nips Jays

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — Seventh-ranked Marquette, behind the late clutch shooting of Lloyd Walton, overcame a furious Creighton charge Saturday night to defeat the 18th-ranked Bluejays, 64-60.

Walton, a 6-1 junior, tallied seven of his 14 points in the final five minutes after Creighton had rallied to take a 54-52 lead.

Walton hit a jumper from the corner to knot the score at 54-54 with 4:56 remaining. A halfminute later, he scored a threepoint play to give the Warriors the lead for good at 57-54.

K-State drops OSU

MANHATTAN, Kan. (UPI) — Mike Evans and Chuckie Williams combined for 39 points Saturday night to lead Kansas State to a 72-63 Big Eight victory over Oklahoma State.

The triumph assured the Wildcats of at least a second place tie in the conference behind champion Kansas with a 10-4 record and a season mark of 18-8. Oklahoma State finished with 5-9 and 10-16.

Shooting 60 per cent, the Wildcats surged ahead midway in the second half after producing a 29-27 intermission margin.

Evans sparked the spurt, getting 18 of his 20 points in the second half. Williams hit 19. Otus Holder led the Cowboys with 17.

Malone hits milestone

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Rookie Moses Malone went over the 1,000-rebound mark as a pro and veteran Ron Boone had 32 points as the Utah Stars buried the Memphis Sounds 120-104 Saturday night in American Basketball Association action.

The 19-year-old Malone scored 25 points and had 20 rebounds. Boone had 22 of his game-high output in the second half as they held off Memphis and a blazing fourth quarter by Collis Jones.

Jones hit 20 of his 22 points in the fourth quarter, but the Sounds never got closer than 14 points down in the last 12 minutes. Tom Owens added 21.

Sonics topple Kings

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Slick Watts, taking advantage of Nate Archibald's five fouls, scored twice within 31 seconds in the final two minutes Saturday to lead Seattle to a 103-99 victory over the Kansas City-Omaha Kings.

The victory was only the second in the Sonics' last six games, while the loss was the Kings' fourth in their last 19 outings. An eight-game winning streak by the Kings in Kemper Arena also was broken.

Bonnies take berth

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — Senior Rudy Hackett scored 32 points Saturday to power Syracuse to an easy 100-81 victory over St. Bonaventure for the title in the Upstate New York Eastern College Athletic Conference tournament and a berth in the NCAA championship.

Syracuse never trailed in the game, jumping off to a quick 12-2 lead and widening that margin to 53-32 at halftime. Hackett had 12 points and 11 rebounds as Syracuse shot 51 per cent from the field in the first half.

Ga Hal wins Arcadia

ARCADIA, Calif. (UPI) — Ga Hal got the type of track he relishes and romped to a threelength victory Saturday in the 16th running of the $55,300 Arcadia Handicap at Santa Anita.

With the track deep in mud, Ga Hal battled Roger's Dandy for the early lead, went to the front in the final turn and then pulled away from his seven rivals to win in hand.

Buhl edges Salmon to claim state A-2 championship

IDAHO FALLS — Slender John Donkersloot hit 14 field goals but two free throws just 37 seconds from the end proved the decisive Saturday night when the Buhl Indians trimmed the scrappy Salmon Savages 67-64 for the State A-2 basketball championship.

Donkersloot's two free throws hoisted the Indians into a 67-62 lead — the second biggest of the night as the much taller Indians had to fight off the hustling Savages from the opening gun.

"They scare me," said Coach Jerry Koester before the game. "They're little, they really don't look good doing it, but they are so unorthadox on defense that they scare you. It'll be a heck of a game."

At the outset it appeared Koester was a poor predictor. The Indians jumped away from a 4-4 tie and into a 9-4 lead. Salmon cut it two and then scrapped from four down twice to gain a 17-17 tie on a shot by Jerry Heels just before the buzzer.

Early in the second quarter Donkersloot, Carey Schmeckpeper and Jerre Hill connected for the insides and again Buhl appeared on the verge of putting the small Savages away. But Shippe and Entanger gunner Salmon back and once it reach 26-25, it was a dogfight without an apparent winner until the final minute.

Buhl moved up by four points in the third period but Parmeter hit twice for a 35-35 tie and the teams battle through draws at 39 and 41 — the last time the 11th time during the contest it was deadlocked.

At that point Entanger and Parmeter shoved Salmon ahead by four points but Donkersloot hit twice to fashion another tie.

Buhl finally put a stop to those tie situations for a while in the final period when Donkersloot collected two field goals and Cary Schmeckpeper a free throws. That took Buhl from two down and into a 51-47 lead with 6:41 to play.

But it was just 3:03 later that Ben Nelson and Shipper collected back-to-back Salmon buckets for another tie at 53.

Donkersloot picked up four points the next two tles down the court and from then on Buhl was in the lead — but struggling to protect it.

Jerre Hills hit three free throws and Donkersloot a field goal over the next couple of minutes, Hills' last free throw sending Buhl up by four points, 63-61.

But Godfrey got one back from the foul line. Buhl then missed a couple of free throw chances, but rebounded the misses. Donkersloot was fouled after the second one and this time tucked it away.

Parameter had a closing field goal for the Cinderella Salmon team before Buhl started chopping down nets and picking up trophies.

Friday night Jerre Hills blew hot in the fourth quarter and Buhl outlasted Vallivue 65-58 in a cliff hanger that wasn't decided until the final 19 seconds.

It was the third straight victory for Buhl over Vallivue this season and all were about the same. However, the first two losses prompted the Vallivue coach to say before that game that he didn't think anyone could beat his club there times.

For a long while, the Indian fans couldn't be sure he wasn't right.

The first quarter was a donnybrook as Buhl went with a man-to-man defense and Vallivue hit 40 to 50 per cent from the field in the first two quarters, respectively.

Buhl's hopes were dimmed when John Donkersloot picked up his third foul in the first 90 seconds of the second quarter and left the game through halftime. But senior Pat Hamilton came on to score seven points and that, along with four rebounds, helped Buhl stay within three by intermission.

Buhl switched to a zone defense in the second half and Vallivue's shooting percentage dwindled. The Indians scored 19 points against the Falcons' 11 during the span and Hills started warming up by hitting four from the outside.

Vallivue came back in the Vallivue zone and his 10 points kept a see-saw duel going.

The game finally swung to Buhl with 19 seconds left when Donkersloot, who played the second half without a foul, knocked down two free throws. Vallivue missed its next shot and Hills was fouled. He potted both free throws with six seconds left to establish the final margin.

Winding up the break

LAYOFF PASS is released by Twin Falls' Gary Miller (24) to teammate Randy Barbour (10) during A-1 basketball action against Borah earlier this week. This win helped point them to the championship game Saturday night.

Capital edges Twin Falls 45-42 for state A-1 title

POCATELLO — The undefeated Capital Eagles picked up two free throws by Sisson with 39 seconds left to nail down a 45-42 decision over defending champion Twin Falls in the state A-1 basketball finals Saturday night.

It was the 26th victory of the season for the Eagles and they were only pressed twice — both times by the Bruins. Capital nipped Twin Falls 62-60 in a double overtime during the regular season.

And for the second time the Eagles took it because Twin Falls couldn't get its free throws down.

But the Bruins battered all the proud marks Capital has hoisted into Southern Idaho Conference records. The Twin Falls defense held Capital to exactly 30 points under its offensive average and the Eagles posted an average win spread of 27 points during the year. In addition, the Bruins held 22.5 average scorer Sean McKenna to 12.

Capital's defense, a very good one that utilizes a pressure man-to-man and dares anyone to challenge it underneath, was the reason for its success Saturday night. The Eagles held Twin Falls to 16 points under their average.

Still it was a proud night for Coach Ron Watson and his Bruins who accomplished something no one at the state tournament considered. Not one starter from last year's championship team was there Saturday night, although Dennis Bowyer and Kelly Newton were the sixth and seventh men.

And it was Ron Watson's first year of varsity coaching. In other words, it was all new to everyone on the Twin Falls bench.

Twin Falls had a great chance early to break away and Capital mounted a 10-point lead in the third period. But nothing came of either surge as the other team refused to wilt.

Twin Falls went ahead 12-4 and moments later 13-6 as Capital had its inside game completely shutout and its outside shooting wasn't there.

But then McKenna hit two quick buckets and Darrell Oakes added another to slide Capital to within one and the teams battled through two ties before Scott Thomas sent the Eagles ahead 19-17 at intermission.

Tim Crist tied it for Twin Falls as the second half opened but for the next few minutes it was Capital. The Bruins had six turnovers — three on steals — and Capital used them to vault ahead 33-23, the lead cresting on Bill Hessing's jumper. Just about all those points came on 18 to 20-foot jumpers.

But just as it looked bleakest for the Bruins, Dennis Bowyer got inside for a bucket and Grayden Stanley chipped in with a three-point play. The outside touch left Capital but swung to Randy Barbour who hit two long ones to pull the Bruins to within two at the third quarter ended.

Bowyer gave Twin Falls' its last lead as the last period began but then came a McKenna field goal, a Grant three-point play and a McKenna follow shot. Bowyer steadied the Bruins with a three-point play but McKenna hit again for a five-point lead.

Stanley and Newton drew Twin Falls to within two but Grant then hit two free throws. Twin Falls' last hope came when Stanley got a tip in, but was called for a foul on the same play. Sisson made both free throws to establish the final count.

Twin Falls had two shots after that

Bowyer honored

POCATELLO — Dennis Bowyer, Twin Falls' leading scorer-rebounder, was named to A-1 state tournament first team by sportswriters-casters covering the meeting.

Bowyer, who helped Twin Falls to second place Saturday night in a 45-42 loss to Capital, was joined on the first unit by Kim Goetz of Moscow and Sean McKenna of Capital and co-outstanding player nominees Scott Narcisian of Coeur d'Alene and Scott Goold of Highland.

Friday night Tim Crist made his first start in two weeks and promptly banged in 19 points and took down six rebounds in leading Twin Falls past Moscow 67-55.

Crist, sidelined by a knee injury, hit seven points in the first six minutes of the fourth quarter as the Bruins marched into a 21-point advantage. Then Coach Ron Watson cleared the bench and Moscow hit 10 of the last 12 points scored in the game.

The Bruins showed poise throughout the game. The played tough defense and were very deliverate offensively. The result was that Twin Falls didn't trail from the middle first quarter on.

It also kept Moscow from getting its run and gun game going.

Coach Watson went with the game plan of figuring 6-6 Kim Goetz would get his points, following a 33-point spree against Highland in the opener. The Bruins played him tough, holding him to 19 — three under his season average. But the main thrust of Watson's plan was to keep the other Bears from helping. No other Moscow player got into double figures and not even Goetz, one of the outstanding college prospects in the country, could whip the Bruins alone.

Twin Falls made a break in the late first and early second quarter, rolling into an eight-point lead but midway through the second period Moscow hurried back to within three at 22-19.

Graydon Stanley and Goetz had offsetting buckets and then Crist and Dennis Bowyer got Twin Falls going. In the final two minutes Bowyer hit four more points and Stanley three — the last at the buzzer — as Twin Falls moved ahead 35-32 at halftime.

Twin Falls' poise was best in the third quarter as the Bruins suddenly went cold, getting only three field goals. But still they pushed ahead by 15 as the defense held and they came out of the period up 46-32.

The fourth quarter brought Twin Falls' point touch back and they started moving away as just about everyone collected points. Gary Miller hit three buckets midway through the period of Twin Falls moved to 19 points ahead and then 21 on Crist's 16th and 17th points. Crist would it up at 63-44 with 1:54 left and Coach Watson went to his bench.

Burley dominates east squad in Magic Valley all-star test

The Burley Bobcats, from the coach through three players, dominate selections on the eastern squad while the west team is divided largely among six schools for the fourth annual Magic Valley all-star basketball game.

The game tentatively is slated for 8 p.m. March 17 at CSI but may be moved to the high school if a conflict can't be overcome.

Coach Ivan Davis, completing his fifth year at the Burley helm, will have the height that took him to a successful season this year in 6-3 Brent Bodily, 6-4 Robert Lynes and 6-5 Bruce Draper.

They are joined on the squad by 6-5 Jerry Ivie of Carey, 6-2 Farrell Newland of Valley; 6-1 Tony Slane of Kimberly; 5-11 Mark Stanger of Hansen; 6-4 Dave Babbitt and 6-0 steve Sharp of Oakley, and 5-10 Tim Martin of Wood River.

Twin Falls, Gooding and Buhl contribute six of the 10 men Coach Gordon Brown of Glenns Ferry will have to work with.

Twin Falls sends 6-6 Dennis Bowyer and 5-11 Kelly Newton; Buhl will have John Donkersloot and 5-11 Jerre Hills, and Gooding will send 6-4 Bruce Ware and 6-1 Kevin Durfee.

Rounding out the western club are 6-1 Steve Shrum of Glenns Ferry; 5-7 Ben Stroud of Camas County; 6-0 John Gough of Wendell; and 6-4 Elee Chapman of Jerome.

The game will operate under the rules of previous years with the zone defense being outlawed and the dunk rule waived.

The easterners hold a 2-1 edge in the series, winning the first two with the west coming back to run away with victory last spring.

Magic Valley Easter Seals Society again will derive the profits from the game, following expenses and rake-off by the fourth district interscholastic activities association.

Teton outlasts Glenns Ferry in A-2 finals

NAMPA (UPI) — Teton's tourney favored Redskins weathered a furious Glenns Ferry rally Saturday night to turn out the lights on the Pilots 56-54 for the class A-2 state basketball championship.

In an earlier game, Lapwai beat Butte County 69-68 for third place and Kamiah beat New Plymouth for the consolation 58-48.

Kevin King scored a Glenns Ferry field goal at the one second mark for the final score but was fouled. Free throw deliberately banked off the rim but Rex Fullmer of the Redskins managed to force a jump ball ending the game.

Gary Furniss, a sophomore led Teton with 10 field goals, 24 points and 17 rebounds as the Redskins controlled the boards.

Fullmer made 14 points for the victors who finished the season 25-2.

Jay Black led Glenns Ferry, which failed in a 22-5 campaign to bring Coach Gordon Brown his first title in 25 years at the Pilot helm. Black had 15 points hot shooting Steve Shrum had 12 and Chris Johnson had 10.

Gary Furniss a sophmore led Teton with 10 field goals.

Friday night Glenns Ferry looked like an easy winner going into the fourth quarter against Butte County but had to battle over the last couple of minutes to stave off the Pirates 61-56.

After a four-point lead in the first period, Glenns Ferry began running away behind the scoring of Jay Black and Steve Shrum. The Pilots bounced ahead 30-14 by intermission and the third quarter was basketball matching.

But in the fourth period, Butte County came up with 26 points — just four less than for the first three quarters.

But despite the sudden hot streak, Butte couldn't get closer than four.

Black ended the night with 21 points while Shrum had 14 and Chris Johnson 11. Mike Coon of Butte led his club with 21.

Carey trips Oakley in consolation

LEWISTON (UPI) — Reserve guard Fred Peck's driving lay in from a stolen pass in the closing seconds gave Carey a 61-58 victory against Oakley for the consolation title of the state A-4 basketball tournament Saturday afternoon.

Carey trailed Oakley most of the game until late in the third period when the district four champs hit four successive field goals including Jerry Ivie's three-point play to take a seven point lead. But Oakley battled back in the rough fourth quarter to take a three point lead with less than three minutes to play.

Carey's Jim Barton hit a jump shot with 58 seconds and Ray Bame stole the ball and passed to Peck whose basket with 30 seconds remaining gave Carey a one-point edge. Barton added a pair of free throws to assure the victory.

Oakley outshot Carey from the field hitting 26 field goals but won the game from the foul line with 15 out of 19 chances.

Game scoring honors went to Carey's Jerry Ivie with 20 Mike Petersen had 12 and Baum 10. Four Oakley players hit double figures. David Babbitt had 12, Tom McBridge and Randy Sharp each had 12 and Terry Poulton 10.

Carey finished the season with a 24-2 record while Oakley finished with a 17-9.

Friday night Terry Poulton and Steve Sharp combined to gun Oakley past the Mullan Tigers 63-57.

The lead see-sawed through the first 11 minutes but Oakley then jumped into a narrow lead and protected it the rest of the way.

Sharp was particularly effective with driving shots and his three-point play late in the third quarter opened up a 49-38 lead. Poulton hit two free throws to extend that to 51-38 just before the period ended.

In the fourth period the two games seemed content trading buckets. Oakley held leads of 11 and nine points, the last time at 60-49 on Babbitt's bucket. But in the final 67 seconds Mullan bounced back on points from Steve Sincovich and Moe Gribble to close the gap to 61-57.

McBride then hit the last bucket of the game.

Earlier Friday, Carey used a big third quarter to break away from Midvale and collect a 60-56 decision.

Midvale, which entered the meet as the undefeated favorite, thus bowed out with two straight defeats.

N.C. outlasts N.C. State for ACC crown

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — Freshman Phil Ford scored 24 points Saturday night to lead 13th-ranked North Carolina to a 70-66 victory over defending national champion North Carolina State in the title game of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament.

The victory gave the Tar Heels, who posted overtime victories in two earlier tournament games, a berth against New Mexico State in next Saturday's first-round NCAA Eastern Regionals.

NCAA officials will choose Sunday between ninth-ranked North Carolina State and No. 2 Maryland, the regular-season ACC champ beaten by the Wolfpack in the semifinals here, for the conference's second berth in the national championship tournament.

North Carolina enjoyed a 41-35 halftime margin but the lead changed hands four times in the second half before the Tar Heels went out front to stay 56-55 with 9:42 to go.

The Tar Heels went to their spread offense after taking the lead, and put the game away at the foul line, adding six points on free throws down the stretch.

Ford, a 6-2 guard, was chosen the tournament's outstanding player. North Carolina State's All-America David Thompson was held to only 16 points.

North Carolina, forced into overtime in its first two games here, now has a 21-7 record compared to 22-6 for North Carolina State.

The two teams played evenly from the opening buzzer and swapped the lead five times in the opening half.

After intermission, North Carolina got only one basket in the first four minutes of play and North Carolina State went ahead 55-53 at the 16:39 mark on a basket by Thompson. But Thompson sank only one more basket during the game and once the Tar Heels got ahead, deadly foul shooting kept them on top.

Ford was joined in double figures by Walter Davis with 14, Mitch Kupchak with 11 and Brad Hoffman with 10.

Freshman Kenny Carr shared Wolfpack scoring honors with Thompson, also getting 16 points. Guard Monte Towe added 14.

Indiana ends season unbeaten

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — Indiana's No. 1 rated Hoosiers, paced by veterans Steve Green and Quinn Buckner, weathered Michigan State's hot-shooting Saturday night for a 94-79 victory and their first unbeaten basketball season.

Coach Bobby Knights's NCAA tourney-bound club also became the first in Big Ten history to beat every other league rival twice in an 18 game schedule. The Hoosiers go into postseason play with a 32-game winning streak, 29 this season, the longest among major teams.

Indiana moved from a 56-40 halftime lead, taking advantage of free throw shooting to boost its lead to 17 points with 1:35 to go.

The Spartans had narrowed the margin to four points on Pete Davis' shooting before John Laskowski established a 10-point lead for Indiana at 86-76.

With 20 seconds to play, Scott May, the team's top scorer who suffered a fractured arm in the second Purdue game recently, went in for Bobby Wilkerson, but failed to score.

Michigan State, 10-8 in the Big Ten and 17-9 overall, was streak-shooting with Terry Furlow hitting from the outside. The Spartans hit 10 of their first 12 shots and took an 11-point lead before being outscored, 19-4, by a Hoosier rally sparked by Green, who gave Indiana a 29-25 lead midway through the first half.

Bill Glover led the Spartans with 20 points. Davis also had 15 for MSU and Lindsay Hairston added 12. Furlow, the Big Ten's leading scorer, had 15 at the half and sat out most of the second half, failing to add to his total.

Green led the Hoosiers with 25 points and Buckner had 13, Kent Benson 15 and freshman Wayne Radford 11.

Trevino has two-shot lead in Citrus open

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Reigning PGA champ Lee Trevino, "jiving" under a hot Florida sun, shot a 70 Saturday to lead the third round of the $200,000 Citrus Open golf tournament by two strokes.

The Merry Mexican, winner of 17 tournaments since joining the tour in 1967, surged ahead of second-round co-leader Hale Irwin when the U. S. Open champ fell into two hazards for a double bogey on the par-4 14th hole.

With earlier rounds of 69 and 66 on the par-72, 6,929-yard layout at Rio Pinar Country Club, Trevino finished 54 holes at 205, 11 under par.

Ben Crenshaw, the young sensation of two years ago who has been in a frustrating slump, turned in a score of 72-68-67-207, with two eagles Saturday to take second place and serve notice he will be in contention in the final round.

"I played gutsy golf today, like I used to," said the 23-year-old Texan who won the first pro tournament he entered after receiving his player's card in 1973, but missed the cut in four of seven tries this year. "I'll be right in there tomorrow."

Trevino had two bogeys and a birdie on the front nine and commented, "I started off like I was in the fifth flight." But he regrouped on the last leg for three more birdies.

"I jive when the weather gets above 75," Trevino said.

With a 70, he said, "I'm surprised I am in the lead and I'm surprised I'm two strokes ahead."

As for the final round, he wouldn't make any predictions.

"I've won some from up here and I've lost some," he said.

Former masters champ Charles Coody was alone in third place with a card reading 71-66-71 — 208, eight under par.

Irwin, Trevino's teammate on the World Cup team last year, shot a disappointing 74 to finish four strokes behind the leader at a seven-under-par 209, along with Bruce Devlin and power-hitter Jim Dent.

Defending champ Jerry Heard fell victim to the winds and lightened fairways of the pine-lined course to record an 81 that put him among the also-rans at 225, nine over par.

And gallery favorite Arnold Palmer was at even par 216 after 54 holes with rounds of 72, 69 and 75.

Jack Nicklaus, Johnny Miller and GAry Player were among the stars who skipped this stop on the PGA tour.

Trevino said he planned to hit some practice balls Saturday night, run two miles and watch TV.

"But if I win tomorrow, I won't be hitting balls and running and watching television, I'll tell you that," he quipped.

Coody was in contention for the lead until he bogeyed three of his last five holes, beginning at treacherous 14, a 405-yarder guarded by a water hazard.

"I'm a little dejected now," he said.

Golden Eagles meet Umpqua to open region 18 JC tournament Monday

The College of Southern Idaho Golden Eagles will go after their fifth straight regional basketball championship Monday night when a four-team elimination tournaments opens in the Golden Eagles' gymnasium.

CSI will play Umpqua Community College of Oregon at 9 p.m. after Ricks College of Rexburg and Lane Community College of Eugene meet in the opener at 7 p.m. The losers play for consolation at 7 p.m. Tuesday night with the winners going on to the title battle at 9 p.m.

The two Idaho teams are expected to meet for the championship as the Oregon Community College Conference has sent a representative to championship games only once since the district was re-organized.

Not much is known about the Oregon schools.

"We're going into this one (the opener) blind," says CSI coach Boyd Grant. "We don't know what they like to do on offense or defense. The only thing we really know is that they're a hustling bunch."

"We understand their leading scorer is Reed, a 6-5 inside man who is averaging 17 points a game and the coach's son, Perkins, is averaging about 11. They appear to start 6-6, 6-5 and 6-4 with both guards around the six-foot mark," he continued.

Coach Boyd will have his small army waiting — all eight of them. Bob Durham may see some spot action, but hardly likely. The Twin Falls sophomore is out of the cast and ran a little late in the week but his ankle remains weak and conditioning after the long layoff is a problem.

Ricks is a known quantity, definitely guard oriented with long-bombing Byron In-The-Woods and frosh Wally Foster. Ricks also is in the 6-6 and 6-5 area, meaning the four-team field should be about the same in the heighth department.

At stake is one berth in the national tournament in Hutchinson, Kans. The nationals should start for the winner on Tuesday afternoon of the following week.

Auburn crimps Alabama's hopes

AUBURN, Ala. (UPI) — Sophomore guard Eddie Johnson scored 27 points Saturday afternoon to lead Auburn to a come-from-behind 76-70 victory over fifth-ranked Alabama dimming the Tide's hopes for an unshared Southeastern Conference basketball title.

The loss left Alabama with three conference defeats, the same as sixth-ranked Kentucky, which closed out its SEC season Saturday night at Mississippi State.

A Kentucky victory would enable the Wildcats to share the title and Kentucky, which beat Alabama twice during the season, would represent the SEC at the NCAA Mideast regionals while Alabama would go to the West regionals.

Charles Russell led scoring for Alabama with 21 points with Charles Cleveland adding 16, Leon Douglas 15 and T.R. Dunn 11.

Auburn's win, before a record crowd of 12,506, increased the Tigers' hopes of a post-season tournament invitation and broke the school record for a homecourt win streak with 12 victories. The record was 11 wins set in 1959.

Alabama led throughout the first half but was unable to stretch the lead to more than seven points. Auburn was usually no more than three to five points behind and the Tigers rallied to lead 41-39 at the half.

Alabama jumped ahead early in the second half and led most of the way, but still could pull no more than seven points ahead of the aggressive Tigers.

Two free throws by Tiger center Pepto Bolden with 2:45 to go tied the game 70-70 and a sudden burst by the Tigers, including three quick steals, gave them the six-point margin of victory.

Texas A-M clinches NCAA tourney berth

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — Sonny Parker and Ray Roberts broke open a close game late in the second-half Saturday and sent Texas A&M to a 74-63 win over Texas that brought the Aggies the undisputed Southwest Conference championship and a berth in the NCAA playoffs.

The win ended the Aggies' regular season with a 20-6 mark, the first time in 62 years of playing basketball A&M has won 20 games in a single season.

With a 12-2 conference mark, Texas A&M will move into the NCAA tournament next Saturday night in Lubbock against Cincinnati, winner of its last 15 games in a row.

A&M had clinched at least a tie for the title last Tuesday night, but needed a win over the rival Longhorns to wrap up the crown by itself. And Texas put up a battle for most of the game.

With the Aggies leading 28-24 with five minutes remaining in the first half, Roberts and Parker helped ignite a spurt that boosted A&M's halftime margin to 40-28. During those final five minutes of the first half, Roberts and Parker scored six points each.

Texas narrowed the gap to only six points with 10 minutes remaining in the game, and at that point Aggie Coach Shelby Metcalf elected to go to a delay game.

The tactic worked as the Aggies ran down the time without losing ground and when the tempo finally picked up again in the final moments A&M ran away from the Longhorns with a series of layups and free shots.

John Thornton and Barry Davis each scored 15 points to lead the Aggies while Tyrone Johnson paced the Longhorns with 19.

CSI places in nationals

COLUMBIA, Mo. — The College of Southern Idaho mile relay team finished seventh and Steve McCalley 10th in the mile run in the national junior college indoor finals Saturday.

McCalley turned in a 4:21.1, nine seconds over his best this year, and wound up five seconds out of first place with eight other runners in between.

Coach Jim Blaisdell blamed the luck of the heat draw for the mile relay team's seventh place showing.

He noted his quartet turned it in 3:22.1 and won its heat by 20 yards. Fourth place was only three-tenths of a second away.

"I feel that if we had been running in one of the two faster heats, we certainly could have picked up a few tenths of a second just because of the competition," he said. "But I'm pleased with the boys. They ran against the clock and did what they had to do."

Although both McCalley and the mile relay team had the best times in the nation going into the event, Coach Blaisdell noted CSI had the advantage of running on the minidome track, second largest indoor layout in the world.

"They had a tartan track without banked corners and it was a lot slower than the ISU track," he said. "Of course, I think probably the ISU track is the fastest in the world."

Coach Blaisdell and his track team will leave Wednesday for a 12-day spring training and competitive stay in Arizona. While there the Eagles will run against two-time outdoor national JC champion Mesa plus two other meets at least.

Mesa finished second in Saturday's national indoors behind Essex Community College of New Jersey.

Colorado has fourth ski crown

DURANGO, Colo. (UPI) — Colorado won its fourth straight NCAA skiing crown Saturday by capturing the jumping event.

Didrik Elletson led the Buffs with his first place leap to take honors for the second consecutive year, followed by Arne Heugen in third and Steve Gaskill in 12th to bring the Buffs 50 points.

The jumping win marks the third straight time CU has taken the event en route to the national title. And Elletson is the third consecutive NCAA champion from Colorado to win in the event.

The Buffs totalled 183 points in the four day championship. Vermont was second with [illegible], followed with Northern Michigan with 95.5 and Wyoming with 93.

Denver, which may be out of the competition next year due to financial cutbacks, was fifth with 83.

Utah, aided by the second place jump [illegible] of Ken Steele, took sixth in the NCAA Championship with [illegible] points ahead of Western State College of Gunnison who placed seventh. Dartmouth was eighth overall with 64 points.

Middlebury was ninth with 41 followed by Fort Lewis College of Durango, Colo. with 1[illegible].

Aussies lead Aetna series

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Australians John Newcombe and Rod Laver beat Americans Stan Smith and Bob Lutz, 6-3, 2-6, 6-3, Saturday, giving the Aussies a slim 3-2 edge in Aetna World Cup competition.

The Aussies will retain the cup if they win any of the two matches set for Sunday, a singles between Laver and Arthur Ashe and a doubles for which the players were to be announced just prior to the match.

NFL players 'flexible' in negotiations with owners

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Team representatives of the NFL players union ended a three-day strategy huddle Saturday and declared themselves ready to be flexible in efforts to settle labor difficulties with the pro football owners.

"Chances of an agreement are better than they were a year ago," Bill Curry, president of the NFL Players Association, said after the final closed session.

Negotiators for the union and the owners had failed to make any progress in bargaining on a new contract at this time last year. The players called a sixweek strike, but shortly before the regular season began reported to their teams without a contract settlement.

"We're much more flexible at this point and the members are more attuned to the difficulties of the situation," Curry said. "We've matured a lot, and everyone has learned a good deal about ourselves and our jobs. If the owners really want a settlement, so do we."

He also said delegates have amended the association's constitution so any tentative bargaining contract will be submitted to a vote of the full membership rather than be subject to ratification only by the union's executive committee and the player representatives.

In addition, Curry pointed out that some of the so-called "freedom issues," important factors in player demands which led to last year's strike, may be on their way to being settled by several court cases now in progress.

After the working sessions, the association honored 26 outstanding performers from last season at an annual awards banquet.

Named as most valuable players by a vote of the membership were two quarterbacks—Oakland's Ken Stabler and St. Louis' Jim Hart.

NIT adds teams

NEW YORK (UPI) — Clemson, Massachusetts, St. John's and Holy Cross were added to the field for the National Invitation Tournament Saturday, bringing the total of bids extended to nine.

St. John's and Holy Cross were defeated Saturday in the ECAC regional championship games, with the Redmen losing to Rutgers and the Crusaders bowing to Boston College.

Clemson was eliminated from the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament Friday, dropping a 76-71 overtime decision to North Carolina.

Massachusettes, 18-7, will be making its fifth NIT appearance.

Teams already invited to the NIT are Princeton, Oral Roberts, South Carolina, Oregon and Southern Illinois.

LaSalle gains spot

EASTON, Pa. (UPI) — Bill Taylor and Joe Bryant produced 60 points between them Saturday to lead LaSalle to a 92-85 victory over Lafayette for the East Coast Conference championship and a berth in the upcoming NCAA Tournament.

Taylor, a 6-5 senior, hit on 12 of 21 shots from the field and eight of his free throws and finished as high scorer with 32 points while Bryant was close behind with 28 points. The 6-10 Bryant also pulled down 16 rebounds.

Lafayette led throughout the first half with junior guard Tod Tripucka scoring 14 of his team-high 22 points before intermission. The Leopards' widest margin of the half came with 9:20 left to play when sophomore Jim Lundy threw in a 20-footer from the corner to give Lafayette a 30-23 lead.

Rutgers cops first berth

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ed Jordan sank a jumper and a foul shot in the last minute of overtime Saturday to give Rutgers a 79-77 victory over St. John's in the ECAC metropolitan New York championship game.

Wepner completes parachute jump

KERHONKSON, N.Y. (UPI) — Despite pleas from manager Al Braverman, Chuck Wepner, who faces Muhammad Ali for the heavyweight title March 24 in the Cleveland Coliseum, went through with a scheduled parachute jump from Storm King Mountain at 9:30 Saturday morning.

The frantic Braverman was informed by hotel management that Chuck and his training entourage had departed for the local airfield to complete a sky jump from about 3,500-4,000 feet he had planned a week ago.

In justification of his actions Wepner said, "I have been doing this regularly for the past two years and all through my tenure in the Marine Corps. To me it's as safe as bike riding or playing golf and a helluva lot more challenging."

A fretting Braverman had other ideas. "There will be absolutely no more sky diving while Wepner is in training for this match," he said prior to Wepner's eight-round sparring session Saturday afternoon.

The drop didn't appear to have any noticeable effect on Wepner's boxing as he breezed through a session with Conrad Tooker, Charlie Wright, Bill Carlson and Bob Rooney, whom he knocked cold in the second frame of a scheduled three round session. Wepner usually jumps about twice a month.

Malone memorial pro-am slated April 18 at Twin Falls golf links

The first annual Larry Malone Memorial scholarship pro-am will be held April 18 at the Twin Falls municipal golf course, announces Professional Clyde Thomsen.

The one-day affair is held in memory of Larry Malone, a former Twin Falls High School golf star who played on the Weber Sttate golf team and also won some junior and senior amateur tournaments in the intermountain area.

He died of cancer at age 22, following a four-year fight with the disease. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Webb Malone, Twin Falls.

Although the idea is Thomsen's, the project has been endorsed by the North Chapter, Rocky Mountain Section, PGA, as an annual event. It's aim is to provide a scholarship of $1,000 to $1,500 to a deserving Idaho high school player each year.

"The idea caught on immediately with the pros," Thomsen said after getting official endorsement. "Not only was Larry a fine player but he was well known and liked by everyone."

Thomsen said the Northern Chapter has a $1,500 stipend per year in mind. However, since the first competition is still to be held, the group can't make a firm committment.

"If we make more money than we need to cover the scholarship, we will immediately write out a check for the remainder and present it to the American Cancer Society," he said.

Thomsen had asked for a June 5 date for the meet since several of Malone's contemporaries are in college and have expressed a desire in wanting to play. But the schedule for the year was pretty well finalized last fall for the section. In another year the Malone pro-am could be moved more toward summer.

The format will have the participating teams opening with a shotgun start at 11 a.m. This will be necessary because a banquet is planned that evening to which all competitors will be invited.

Special commemoration prizes will be presented to the winners. While the professionals will provide merchandise prizes for amateur winners in addition to paying their entry fee.

Thomsen said the formula for picking the annual winner hasn't been solidified as yet. Currently the professionals are looking at a point system that will be kept for several junior tournaments.

These basically would include the high school state finals, the John Dropping tournament, Idaho Golf Association junior, Pro-Proxy USGA junior and the state amateur.

However, Thomson said he would prefer that the award not be wired so closely to such events.

"Larry Malone was an outstanding young man and we feel that the recipient should be of high moral quality, too. We'd also like to work academic accomplishment into the formula. I mean, there's no reason to give $1,500 for college to a high school player who has a D grade point average," Thomsen points out.

Thomsen said it would be possible for any student, frosh through senior to win the stipend. The Idaho Interscholastic Activities Association has given tentative approval to a play whereby a junior could be announced as the winner. But he would not receive the money until he has graduated from high school.

At that time the $1,500 check will be written to the college of the recipient's choice.

UCLA nips USC 82-78 to win Pac-8 title

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Pete Trgovich sank two free throws with 23 seconds to go and Marques Johnson tallied on a driving layup as time ran out Saturday to give the thirdranked UCLA Bruins a thrilling 72-68 victory over University of Southern California for their ninth consecutive Pacific-8 basketball title.

The Bruins, who prevented a tie with Oregon State by beating USC for the second time this season, led by 13 points at halftime. But the Trojans fought back and held a seven-point lead at 65-58 with 5:11 to go, mainly on the outside shooting of forward Bob Trowbridge.

UCLA'S Richard Washington's 12-foot turnaround with 48 seconds left tied the score at 68-68 and the Trojans took a timeout.

Trgovich intercepted a pass from freshman Earl Evans to Gus Williams and was immediately fouled by Williams. The Bruin senior then sank two free throws on a one-on-one basis and USC took another timeout.

After the timeout, Williams missed the Trojans' last shot attempt from close-in and UCLA's Johnson rebounded and dribbled the length of the floor for the insurance basket.

Dave Meyers had 14 points while Washington and Trgovich each collected 13 for the Bruins, who will play Big Ten runner-up Minnesota in the opening round of the NCAA West Regionals at Pullman, Wash., next Saturday.

For USC, which will represent the Pac-8 in the National Commissioners Invitational Tournament at Louisville next week, Trowbridge finished with 24 points, 16 of them in the second half. He was 11 for 18 from the floor.

Williams checked in with 18, 14 in the second half.

UCLA wound up with a 12-2 conference record, thus preventing Oregon State from getting a tie for the league title with a win at Oregon Saturday night.

Amateur athletics feud probe set by commission

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A special presidential commission seeking to eliminate squabbles between U.S. amateur sports organizations and improve the nation's showing in international competition will begin meeting this month, a White House official said Saturday.

The commission has already selected most of the 14 members who will serve on the panel, including former Olympic champion Rafer Johnson and former Oklahoma Football Coach Bud Wilkinson.

The White House official, Michael T. Harrigan, is expected to be named the commission's executive director. He confirmed that others named to the panel include former decathlon champion Bill Toomey; Willye White, a five-time Olympic long jump contestant, and Micki King, an Olympic diving champion who has just accepted a new position as head of women's athletics at UCLA.

Sens. J. Glenn Beall of Maryland and Richard Stone of Florida and Reps. Norman Mineta of California and Jack Kemp, Buffalo, will represent Congress on the commission. Kemp is a former Buffalo Bills' quarterback.

Harrigan told UPI the commission would assemble sometime this month after its budget is approved by the White House. The commission plans year-long hearings and will have a budget between $700,000 and $1 million, he said.

At least one doctor, several businessmen and a lawyer will also be named to the commission, Harrigan indicated.

He emphasized that the commission did not intend to examine activities by amateur organizations in sports such as football and baseball which are not involved in international competition.

"We are confining ourselves to international sports, while means basically the Olympics but also other competitions," Harrigan said.

"The essential problem is organizational, and the disputes between the NCAA and AAU are only symptomatic."

The two major domestic amateur athletic organizations have long been in dispute over permitting young athletes to participate in events certified by the other organization.

"We want to examine the way the organizations relate to each other as organizations and on a sport-by-sport basis. Conflicts result in athletes being manipulated as pawns in various jurisdictions. Our international image is damaged because less than the best teams are finally sent to international competitions. When we send a track team to the Soviet Union or Poland, that's the same thing as the Olympics."

Harrigan said the commission would spend its first five months examining the overall organization of amateur athletics in the United States. The following seven months will deal with a sport-by-sport examination of problems in international competition.

He added that the focus would start with the International Olympic Committee, "not necessarily because it is a culprit, but because it is a way of getting at the problem.

"They (the Olympic Committee) take a bum rap sometimes for things their members do. They have 250 member groups."

Harrigan said he hoped the commission could work out compromises among the various athletic groups without resorting to lawmaking in Congress, but added "the fact they have been fighting each other for 50 years may mean there probably will have to be legislation."

Political, money aid needed for Idaho's wildlife future

BOISE (UPI) — The director of the Idaho Fish and Game Department told the Idaho Wildlife Federation 1974 was one of the poorest years for the state's prime hunting and fishing species.

Joseph Greenley said the populations of such species as elk and salmon are declining because of habitat changes, man made influences and natural plant succession.

Terming the problem "critical," Greenley said Idaho has the technology to correct the problems if political and funding obstacles can be overcome.

Greenley said the main reason elk populations are decreasing is because of declining habitat. He added however, that predation and hunter harvests may also influence the lower elk populations.

With proper funding, Greenley said it is possible to control burn some forest land to restore forage production on wintering areas.

He noted the run of salmon and steelhead last fall was only about one-fifth its normal size. "There were not enough fish enroute to Idaho to provide fishing for Idaho's anglers and wild and hatchery fish to spawn and perpetuate the run," he said.

Greenley said dams on the lower Snake and Columbia rivers have killed young salmon and steelhead by the millions on their migration to the ocean. He said commercial sport and Indian fisheries on the Columbia River have contributed to the problem by taking excessive numbers of fish.

He said his department was working with four other states in correcting deficiencies at the dams. But he said that such problems have usually been outside the jurisdiction of the state.

Stanford coach ends 22-year cage career

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — Howie Dallmar, the good guy coach at Stanford University the last 22 years, said goodbye to college basketball Saturday.

Dallmar, who starred as a player at Stanford, played two years in the National Basketball Association with the Philadelphia Warriors and also coached at Pennsylvania for five seasons, said his decision to quit was not a hasty one.

"I've been thinking about this for quite some time," he said. "There have been a lot of frustrations the last three or four years, a lot of close losses and turnovers, but I have enjoyed the whole bit.

"I've had a lot of great young players and it's been a pleasure to work with them, all of them. Now, I plan to do something else. What exactly, I don't know at the moment, but I'll try a lot of things."

Stanford Athletic Director Joe Reutz said he had tried to persuade Dallmar, a very popular coach among players, fans and other coaches, to stay on.

"We tried very hard to persuade Howie not to quit," Reutz said, "but he felt it was time to step down. We are currently exploring the possibility of Howie assuming other duties in the department."

There was one report that Dallmar, who is 52, has been asked to assume the job of director of Stanford's intramural sports program.

Iowa rallies past Illinois

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI) — Dan Frost sank three free throws and Larry Parker and Larry Moore each fired in shots in the last 65 seconds of the game to bring Iowa from a four-point deficit to a 73-70 victory over Illinois Saturday.

Frost was fouled as the Hawkeyes returned from a timeout with only a minute left. He made two free throws, cutting the Illini lead to 70-68.

Help offered

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Dozens of persons have offered to donate one of their kidneys to former all-NFL defensive tackle Jess Richardson, who has been hospitalized for 14 weeks and needs a kidney transplant.

A columnist for the Philadelphia Inquirer reported Friday that Richardson, who played for the Philadelphia Eagles and Boston Patriots, was undergoing dialysis treatment at Temple University Hospital here.

In response to the column, readers contacted the newspaper, the hospital and Richardson offering to donate a kidney, but doctors have told Richardson his blood pressure and weight must drop before an operation can be performed.

Richardson, who played collegiate ball at Alabama, spent nine seasons with the Eagles and three with the AFL Patriots.

Kansas grabs crown

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI) — Guards Dale Greenlee and Clint Johnson hit 14 points each and Danny Knight pulled down 11 rebounds Saturday as Kansas clinched its second straight Big Eight basketball title by dumping Oklahoma 74-63.

The win in the regionally televised contest left the Jayhawks with an 11-3 conference record and 19-7 overall going into the NCAA regional playoffs. It climaxed a ragged season that saw Kansas, although heavily favored and the winner of the pre-season tournament, trail most of the conference season.

Hailey man violates subdivision code

HAILEY — A Hailey man has reportedly subdivided a parcel of land into three different pieces without submitting a plat to the city.

Don Litzinger has already sold two of the parcels, located between Spruce and Silver Streets and recorded the deed with the county.

Hailey Planning and Zoning Commission chairman Grant Patterson said Tuesday night Litzinger was in direct violation of the subdivision ordinance.

The entire parcel of land Litzinger owns has never been platted, Patterson said. The discrepancy was pointed out to the planning and zoning board when the deed came through the county assessor's office.

County assessor Del Nicholson was told by the board Tuesday night to furnish them with the names of all violators he is aware of who continue to subdivide without a plat.

Litzinger could not be reached for comment.

Timely train surprises officers

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Police were caught by surprise and had to scurry to get into position for a stakeout of an Amtrak train arrival.

Nine officers were startled into action because the northbound streamliner "Coast Starlight" arrived at precisely 8:05 p.m. — exactly on schedule.

Police said they just made it to their assigned spots in time to capture five persons who later were charged with possession of marijuana for sale and conspiracy for sale of marijuana.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, MAR. 9, 1975

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to show you are thoughtful and considerate of others by truly living the Golden Rule and extending courtesies. Also, a day to study and put into effect a modern course of action that will increase your abundance later on.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Your friends understand your aims better now and will do their utmost to help you gain them. Study ways to gain personal goals.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Visit persons and make a great impression because of your special charm which is dynamic now. A bigwig views you most favorably.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get in touch with individuals who can give you the data you require at this time. Show that you are a go getter. Be wise.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Your intuition is working well, so plan a campaign that will bring you the results you desire. Be thoughtful of others.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Discussing the future with an associate will bring the accord you want. Spend only within your means. Use extreme care in motion.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A good day to do something thoughtful for those who have supported you loyally in the past. Don't neglect health treatments.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make plans early to engage in activities you like and to be in the company of persons you enjoy. A time to express creative ideas.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Engage in activities that will improve conditions around you. Show others that you have your feet squarely on the ground.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Attend the services of your choice or engage in philosophical studies that will make your life more ideal. Relax tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Plan how to have increased abundance in the days ahead. You can easily impress others now by using good practical methods.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) The social side of life can be very good for you today from every standpoint. Take time for meditation. Improve your appearance.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Inspired ideas come to you early in the day. Plan the future wisely. Don't permit others to take advantage of your good nature.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those clever young people who understands early in life what is going on. Give the best education you can afford so the fine energy and intellect here are expended in the right direction. Be sure to give ethical training early.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

L.M. Boyd

Who were the first settlers to come here across the Atlantic? Who held the first Thanksgiving? Who invented the log cabin? The Pilgrims? Most say that. It's wrong. Almost a thousand colonists got here before the Pilgrims. At least two Thanksgivings were celebrated in Virginia 10 years before the Mayflower showed up. And the Swedes put up the first log cabin over there, not here.

SOME garment makers say they can predict good times or bad times by the clothing women buy. As a recession sets in, they say, the ladies who buy any clothes at all go in mostly for sportswear. When an economic boom is imminent, they pick out fancy dresses with the expectation that their gentlemen friends will take them out more.

COFFEE STAINS

Yes, my dear, it's true that coffee stains on wooden floors will come clean, if rubbed gently with steel wool and alcohol.

Q. "DOES A DEER hit by a 30-30 bullet hear the rifle bang?"

A. Not if it's killed instantly.

PEOPLE who don't know much about music tend to hear it better in the left ear than in the right. But musicians seem to hear it better in the right ear than in the left. The why of this peculiarity I can't explain, sorry to say. It was reported by a pair of Columbia University scholars who made an extensive study of the matter.

TRAVEL

A New York City travel bureau printed on a Mexico City tour advertisement: "Don't drink the water." Irritated by this, a Mexico City travel bureau printed on a New York City tour advertisement: "Don't breathe the air."

ITEM NO. 724C in our file labeled "Survival" reads: "If lost in the desert, never take your shoes off. In high heat, it's just about impossible to get them back on. You don't want to try walking through the desert in your bare feet, do you? Certainly not."

REMEMBER that 1 times 9 plus 2 equals 11. And 12 times 9 plus 3 equals 111. And 123 times 9 plus 4 equals 1,111. And 1234 times 9 plus 5 equals 11,111. Continue to figure in this manner on up to 12,345,678. You will find that this number times 9 plus 9 equals 111,111,111. Enough? All right.

Shoshone irrigation fees raised to $5 per lot

SHOSHONE — Irrigation fees per lot in the city limits will double this spring, from $2.50 to $5.

People on the north side of town who use the city ditch and pay on that for irrigation, will pay $3 per city lot to the city plus the $2 ditch fee, while all others will pay the $5 per lot for the sprinkler irrigation system.

The city will also designate a maximum lot size for this fee, with probably 4,800 square foot designated as the maximum for the $5 fee, and adjustment with a higher fee for a bigger lot.

Approval of the ordinance is expected after it is again read on March 24, at the same time the city budget hearing is held. Mayor E.R. Werry said the city plans to bill users the new amount with the April billings.

The mayor said the city is looking into the possibility of drilling a new well, probably located on the south side of town on some city-owned lots since the water pressure is very poor in this area, in the summer months particularly.

Increased water hookups are straining the current water system, the mayor points out. He said he had written letters looking into federal funds that might be available for assisting with a new well system.

The mayor also said the city is continuing to study the dog leash law proposal. Exact regulations pertaining to such things as fees for spayed or unspayed dogs are to be further studied before action is taken on this matter.

Since the dog leash law was first considered in February, the city has received just one letter opposing any leash law of any kind. This was from Grant Jacobsen.

Numerous verbal opinions, both for and against the proposal, however, have been received.

DEAD LAMBS and sheep surround sheep farmer Jerry Lane, Stanwood, Mich. The animals were accidently contaminated with feed containing polybrominated byphenyls, a fire retardant. Lane has been losing about 10 head per day since contamination of his feed at the local Farm Bureau. (UPI)

Milk order system boosts prices

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Agriculture Department experts say in a little-noted report that the agency's controversial milk marketing order system has raised prices "modestly" for consumers.

But experts argued that "on balance," the system is not inflationary. They said elimination of the system would not lower consumer prices in the short run and would mean reduced consumer supplies in the long run.

Under the marketing order system, which has been coming under increasing fire recently from some consumer groups, the Agriculture Department sets minimum prices for milk sold by farmers in more than 60 major milksheds around the nation. Farm co-ops supplying each of the milksheds are then left free to seek — and frequently get — contracts with handlers at prices above the federal minimums.

The National Consumer Congress, in a statement opposing a pending Congressional proposal to increase minimum prices for manufacturing-grade milk, said yesterday that consumers "have serious questions about where their milk dollars are going."

"Until Congress re-evaluates the complex pricing mechanisms for milk and the monopoly control of milk supplies by large co-ops, we must not sanction constant increases in price supports," the consumer group said.

The manufacturing-milk increase under consideration in Congress would boost prices for milk used in making products like butter, cheese and nonfat milk powder. This increase would serve as a base for hikes in the prices paid under marketing orders for bottling grade milk. The bottling prices, although based initially on the manufacturing-milk price, are calculated separately for each milkshed to reflect varying cost and supply factors in different parts of the country.

The Agriculture Department's review of marketing orders and their impact on prices was part of a series of government studies — ordered by President Ford — in which a wide range of programs were analyzed to assess their impact on inflation.

The milk study conceded that the complex marketing order system has had "some significant effect, over time, on undergirding" the ability of farmers to demand prices above the federal minimum level.

Experts claimed, however, that "major changes at this time, such as removal of all orders — or a significant reduction in the class I price differential would have little or no effect on market prices now and in the near future." They said co-ops are now powerful enough to keep actual market prices — above current minimums for a time even if the price floors are reduced.

But in the long run, the report added, cutting the minimum price for bottling grade milk now — at a time when farm operating costs are at record levels — would be seen by farmers as "a strong signal to get out of milk production." Eventually, the report asserted, this would reduce milk supplies.

Michigan farmers' plight grows

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Leonard Rehkoef's dairy cows once resembled "walking skeletons," but he continues to sell milk from the herd.

"We've got to make a living," explains his wife. "We can't even afford to replace the cows we already lost."

Rehkoef and hundreds of other Michigan farmers, already pinched by a sagging economy, discovered last year a poisonous chemical had been accidentally mixed into livestock feed.

While state lawmakers debate contamination levels, many farmers are sinking deeper into debt.

Sheep farmer Jerry Lane of Stanwood, Mich., feels trapped. He cannot sell his animals because they were contaminated, but he must continue feeding them because the state will not reimburse him if he slaughters the sheep.

A flame-retarding chemical called PBB was accidentally mixed in with the livestock feed distributed by Farm Bureau Services. Under federal and Michigan law, herds with levels of PBB contamination below .30 parts per million are not considered dangerous enough for quarantine or slaughter.

When the state first tested Lane's herd of 667 sheep, they showed about .24 parts PBB per million, still within the legal level. But Lane said the animals suffered from distended stomachs, weight loss and birth deformities despite the low testing level.

A new test was ordered, and one tissue sample showed .80 parts PBB per million contamination. The state Department of Agriculture then quarantined Lane's herd, but he says he is worse off now than before.

"After the sheep were quarantined, I figured I could get rid of them and bring in the ewes which are ready to lamb," he said. "I went to the farm bureau but they said they wanted more tests before they could do anything.

"Now I can't sell the sheep because they're quarantined and I can't get rid of them because the farm bureau wants more tests."

While a state investigation continues, more state residents have reported suspected illnesses from eating contaminated foods.

Rehkoef's wife says her family has been suffering health problems, including headaches and aches in one teen-ager's legs.

A Mecosta County physician says he has diagnosed more than 20 patients with liver damage. The only thing they had in common, he said, was they all had consumed meat or products from contaminated animals.

New beef grading official

WASHINGTON (UPI) — New federal beef grading standards — which officials predict will help consumers get leaner, cheaper meat — have been adopted by the Agriculture Department.

The new standards, effective April 14, nonetheless have prompted some consumer groups to argue that shoppers will not be assured of getting benefit of expected lower production costs if farmers use less grain in fattening cattle.

The Agriculture Department Thursday adopted the new standards which will allow beef with slightly less fat content to qualify for the federal Choice and Prime grades.

In addition, the standards for the Good grade — which ranks just below Choice — were narrowed to produce a more uniform and lean product costing less to produce than higher grades.

While endorsing standards that would encourage production of leaner beef, some consumer groups urged that it be done by establishing a completely new federal grade.

Backers of the plan contended this would avoid charging consumers Choice grade prices for some beef which is currently included in the lower Good grade.

John C. Pierce, head of the Agriculture Department's livestock division, said the objective of a new grade was largely met by redesigning the old Good grade. If the new regulation raised the proportion of the total beef supply awarded the Choice label, he said, the increased supply "probably will eventually mean lower prices for consumers."

The Idaho farmer. You need him. He needs you.

We need Idaho's farmers.

Understandably, for food. Since the average American farmer produces enough food for 52 people, they're pretty important.

In Idaho, much of our own meat n' potatoes diet is grown right here in our own backyard. Idaho is the 6th major cattle producing state in the West. And everybody knows about "World Famous Idaho Potatoes".

But one thing not everybody knows is the role agriculture plays in the state's economy. Between 40% and 60% of the value of all the goods and services produced in Idaho depends in some way on agriculture. Idaho is second only to South Dakota in the percent of total personal income that arises from farming.

As the state's major industry, it's also its major taxpayer. Agriculture accounted for more than $25 million in real estate taxes last year, and millions more in sales taxes and income taxes. In fact, when all of Idaho's farmers have a good fiscal year, the state government has a good fiscal year.

Even jobs in the state are dependent upon agriculture: About 1 in 2. A full 19% of all Idaho jobs are in either farming or food processing, and perhaps another 20 to 40 percent depend indirectly on Idaho agriculture.

Now with all that going you'd think agriculture could stand by itself.

Wrong.

The farmers and ranchers of Idaho need us, just as we need them.

They need us to buy their goods. And they have to buy the services and goods that each of us produces. Every day they purchase transportation, equipment, and raw materials. Not to mention food, clothing and housing.

They need us to understand the value of agriculture in the state. And to help keep it vital and productive. Tying it all together, it's easy to see why agriculture is Idaho's single most important business. For more information on why you need Idaho farmers and ranchers as much as they need you, write the Idaho Wheat and Bean Commissions, Suite M, Owyhee Plaza, Boise, Idaho 83702.

Valley Comment: Depression coming?

Question: Do you think the current recession will move into a depression or will it level off at the present condition?

Grace Howard, Twin Falls:

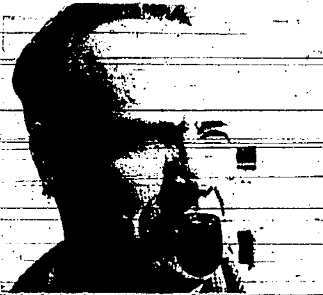
"I think it will get worse. In fact, I think we are in a depression now and I don't think things are going to get much better."

Richard S. (Buck) Wilson, Twin Falls:

"We're in a depression now, aren't we. At least money wise, things are depressed. I think things are going to get worse before they get better."

Phillip Cullinan, Twin Falls:

"It looks to me like things will probably remain about the same as they are now for a while. Nationally, it's bad news economically."



Mrs. Joseph Player, Vancouver, Wash.:

"Well, I hope things will level off. I feel things will probably get at least a little worse before they get better. It's hard to say what will happen, but I think we have to be conservative especially with the gasoline and fuel situations what they are."

Mary Henning, Twin Falls:

"I believe the situation is going to level off. I don't think things are as bad as people make them sound. The recession probably won't get any worse."

Gary Diamond, Wendell:

"I hope the situation improves and I think in time it will. I hope it has gotten about as bad as it will."

Bill Stevenson, Twin Falls:

"We will probably go from bad to worse if they don't do something soon. There isn't much difference between a recession and a depression. If the government would do something about the 12 to 13 per cent interest rates and get money back in circulation we would be better off."

Pastor J. L. Chandler, Twin Falls:

"Things will get worse, I feel. Possibly we could get into another depression like the 1930s unless something is done soon to turn the situation around."

Miniskirt judge suspended

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — "Miniskirt judge" Noel Cannon is under suspension from the bench. Bringing her chihuahua and a mechanical canary to court, jailing defense lawyers and threatening to perform "a .38 caliber vasectomy" on a policeman were too much for a group of her peers.

The State Commission on Judicial Qualifications lodged 25 charges of misconduct against her Monday with the state supreme court. It asked she be removed as a municipal court judge, an action which disqualified her from sitting in judgment on any case.

One of the charges is the curly haired, 48-year-old blonde hears cases with her chihuahua on her lap, while a mechanical canary trills and chirps from her chambers behind them.

Another charge involves an alleged threat to perform the ".38 caliber vasectomy" on motorcycle officer Richard Fagin, whom she called a "male chauvinist," on Nov. 30, 1972.

Fagin said he rebuked a woman — who turned out to be the judge — for repeatedly sounding her auto horn at the car in front in traffic. He said the other driver was obeying the law by waiting for a pedestrian.

"She told me she would honk her horn any time she damn well pleased," Fagin told a hearing by the judicial commission.

"M'am, there is a vehicle code section that covers excessive use of the horn," he replied.

"You go to hell, officer," the judge allegedly snapped back.

The commission's charges included 15 counts of wilful misconduct in office and 10 of conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice.

She left her courtroom Monday to take the telephone call informing her of the commission's decision, and did not return.

She said later, "I would not be interested in commenting on this."

Although suspended from the bench, she remains in office and continues to draw her salary. She has 30 days to contest the commission's recommendation to the supreme court.

Judge Cannon, on the bench 12 years, has been criticized in the past by other judges for her thigh high miniskirts — a controversy that left her with the "miniskirt judge" nickname.

She also has received criticism for painting her chambers pink and for recommending women carry hatpins or derringer pistols to ward off rapists.

New hurdle for parents

By ERMA BOMBECK

At a time of my life when it is difficult for me to make a decision between a cheap weak bleach or a stubborn stain fighter, I am hit with another responsibility: PARENTAL DISCRETION.

Parental discression is a full-time job in this country. You can't turn around without a child shoving a movie ad or a TV Guide into your face with a little box that reads, "Due to mature subject matter, PARENTAL DISCRETION is advised."

I used to read a lot . . . AND NEEDLEPOINT . . . NOW ALL I get done is Discret.

At Wit's End

Last week alone I had to Discret on a drama dealing with a necktie strangler, a young girl who murdered both of her parents with an axe, Requiem For a Nun, a hotel full of weirdos and a chaplain who fooled around.

"Mom, can't we watch the show on the nun?"

"No, the listing says the language and the radical epithets are offensive."

"What are radical epithets?" asked my son.

"Somethihg naval officers wear on their shoulders."

"Are you sure?" he squinted.

"How about a poem on a tombstone?" I asked.

"Can't we watch the show on the chaplain? He's only fooling around."

"Yes, but he's doing it on prime time . . . as a career. Why don't you see a nice movie?"

Actually, my kids and I witness more violence between one another on what they're going to view as they're likely to see on a screen anywhere.

"Can we see Lenny?" one asked.

"No. It's loaded with perversion."

"What's perversion?" he persisted.

"The extra point after a touchdown. How about Old Yeller?"

"How about Confessions of a Window Cleaner?" he pursued.

"Absolutely not! I've never trusted anyone with clean windows."

"How about Blazing Saddles?"

"I heard there're enough four-letter words in it to open a branch Navy in every country in the world. And the same goes for Young Frankenstein."

As I slumped exhausted into a chair I said to my husband, "You Discret for awhile."

"How can you exercise discretion on movies and TV shows you've never seen? I mean, how do you know Young Frankenstein is objectionable?"

"Easy. Everyone in their class loved it!"

Big boom in wagons

HARRISBURG (UPI) — In a year of slumping auto sales, Pennsylvania has received the covered wagon business.

The Pennsylvania Bicentennial Commission has ordered the construction of 60 Conestoga wagons, and the first nine already are finished. Each costs $5,000. According to John Tyler, Curator of Science and Industry Exhibits at the William Penn Museum here, the going price of a wagon circa 1756 was $150.

Unfortunately for state pride, all 60 are being built, not in Pennsylvania, historic origin of the Conestogas, but at Jonesboro, Ark. Pennsylvania's own Amish wagon builders — first to be asked — would not undertake so large an order.

But the new wagons are replicas — with one exception — of the Pennsylvania Farm Museum's Gingrich wagon at Landisville, Pa., with oak undercarriages, white pine bodies and hoops for the canvas tops fashioned by a New Holland, Pa., firm.

The one deliberate bow to modernity involves use of steel rods in axles and ball bearings in wheel hubs.

The Conestogas will serve as the focus of a $5 million Bicentennial project aimed at bringing one covered wagon from each state and the District of Columbia across historic U.S. wagon trails to converge at Valley Forge on July 4, 1976.

The first pilgrimage wagon is slated to start from the Washington State hamlet of Blaine — northwestern most point in the U.S. — this June.

The Washington wagon — which will winter at Ft. Laramie, Wyo. — will average 20 miles a day on the year-long trip to Pennsylvania behind double teams of horses.

Pennsylvania's Bicentennial wagon-train project is the brainchild of Mrs. Thelma Gray, member of a Philadelphia advertising agency. The State Bicentennial Commission has paid $276,000 thus far to plan the Conestoga pilgrimage.

C. Robert Gruver, Philadelphia, wagon-train director, said the nation's recession has not made easier his task of enlisting thousands of volunteers and soliciting services, equipment and cash.

Gruver also said that detailed plans are still in development.

Each state's caravan will be headed by a Conestoga, with the individual state's own bicentennial insignia emblazoned on its canvas top. Vans and station wagons will transport extra teams of horses and staff.

The North American Trail Ride Conference, of Concord, Calif., will draw on its membership of five million persons with 10 million horses, Gruver said, to provide horses and outriders.

The outriders — outrigger canoemen in Hawaii — will fan out from wagon-train routes to collect signatures on scrolls reaffirming faith in America.

Wagons representing Hawaii and Alaska will start from the U.S. West Coast after signed scrolls from both states have been delivered to them.

Gruver said the wagons heading for Valley Forge will follow five main wagon caravans traveling each of the five main trunk routes will be led by an additional Conestoga show wagon and chuck wagon.

Gruver said shows will be performed for nightly encampments.

Western wagons will come down the Missouri River and up the Ohio by barge, courtesy of a $250,000 gift, Gruver said, from the American Waterways Operators, Inc.

Gruver said the wagons have reduced Valley Forge, site of Washington's Revolutionary War encampment, they will begin their own 1976, three-month encampment, to mark the 200th anniversary of the nation's founding.

R. Redford captivates fans

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — That's really Robert Redford several thousand feet in the air wing-walking on an ancient biplane in Universal's "The Great Waldo Pepper."

In his first film since "The Sting," Redford's derring-do and engaging on-screen personality should continue to captivate his legions of adoring fans.

He insisted on doing the dangerous wing-walking himself to add an extra dimension to his title role.

His performance may be the best and most subtle of his rocketing career. Once again Redford demonstrates an ability to enhance a role by embossing his own personality on a characterization much as did Gable and Cooper.

"The Great Waldo Pepper" is clearly a Redford vehicle. It is also a tender story of man's passion for flight in rickety old post-World War I airplanes when the skies were clean and life aloft, and on the ground, was less complicated.

Waldo Pepper, a hot-shot pilot who longed for glory in aerial combat over Europe, takes to barnstorming and the air circus after the Armistice. His dream is to become the first pilot to perform an outside loop.

Redford is at his best playing not-too-bright characters. And Pepper is a simple, immature man with no real emotions except for the fragile aircraft and the unconfined elation of winging through endless blue skies.

The story and direction are the work of George Roy Hill who worked with his star previously in "Butch Cassidy and The Sundance Kid" and "The Sting." This time out Hill, a former top-flight military pilot who flies his own plane, brings to the screen a special lilting ballad of flight.

One soars with the filigreed little planes in their aerial ballets. There is a lyrical feeling and rhythm to the action shots which is quite apart and very much superior to Henry Mancini's score.

The movie is a labor of love for Hill who has captured magnificent plane-to-plane and ground-to-plane aerial photography. Perhaps the best ever filmed.

Only when the script touches ground does the action slow down.

There is comedy, drama and, eventually, tragedy when Waldo Pepper — who is considerably less than great — realizes his dream as a Hollywood stunt flyer in mock aerial combat with the great German ace, Ernst Kessler.

"The Great Waldo Pepper" is the story of a man unable to harness the destructive forces of frustration in pursuit of his dreams.

TEXTURE is "where it's at" in rugs and carpets for today's home interiors... so here are a few words to remember so you can sound like an expert, or understand the ads better.

SHAG and PLUSH are very big right now. Shags use long yarns, straight or twisted, creating a loose long pile texture that is "shaggy." They're casual and fun to live with. PLUSHES are straight cut pile carpets woven very densely so that they look soft but solid. The effect is elegant. SPLUSHES are what they sound like, in between a shag and a plush.

SCULPTURES are pile carpets with design carved into the surface, either by hand or new machine techniques. MULTILEVEL LOOP carpets combine loop piles of different heights to create interesting textures in a very practical, hardwearing carpet type.

FRIEZE means tightly twisted yarns that create a rough-textured surface.

RANDON - SHEARED carpets combine cut and loop piles in many lengths and patterns. The effect provides surface variety that is both pleasing and practical.

Radical years recalled

United Press International

Five years ago, the nation's college campuses were hotbeds of political dissent. Today, student radicals have dropped into obscurity and only the clomp-clomp of an occasional sneaker-clad streaker disturbs the halls of academia.

John Froines, acquitted in the tumultuous Chicago Seven riotconspiracy trial, is now Vermont's director of occupational health and safety. Efforts by conservatives to have him removed have gathered little steam.

Barry Stein, accused of attacking a policeman during the militant "Weatherman" faction's 1969 Days of Rage riots in Chicago, is to appear in court in Chicago Friday to answer the charges.

Stein assumed the name Danny Wight and established the Green Mountain Health Center in Brattleboro, Vt., before surrendering to authorities last year.

Paul Soglin, one-time leader of student dissent at the University of Wisconsin's Madison campus, turned his leadership abilities in another direction. He's the mayor of Madison.

Stephen Holbrook, who participated in the civil rights movement in the south and led antiwar demonstrations in Utah — most notably a sit in at the Salt Lake Tribune — is now a state legislator.

"It takes something concrete like being drafted or your friends being killed in a war to make people turn to violence and mass demonstrations," Holbrook said of the current dirth of collegiate political activity.

At Kent State University, where two students were killed in National Guard troops during demonstrations in 1970, Dr. David Ambler, vice president of educational and student services, believes ending the war and the draft was only partly responsible for ending student dissent.

"Tragically," he adds, "people on our campus and elswhere across the country learned that using violence as a means to protest violence was somewhat of a contradiction that had tragic results here and elsewhere," he said. "I think students grew weary of those kind of tactics to resolve our problems."

Mario Savio rallied students to the freedom of expression cause at the University of California-Berkeley in 1964. He dropped his protest activities in 1973 after marrying Suzanne Goldberg, whom he met when they were arrested together at a sit-in. They asked that, as a wedding present, the Vietnam War be ended.

Savio since has been divorced and keeps a low profile, shunning publicity.

While most say dissent declined because the issues were settled, some blame the drug subculture for the end of political activism.

"A lot of the people who would be into politics are into drugs. You know, if you can't change the world, make your own," a University of Chicago graduate student said. "Then, of course, there's the old frat (fraternity) types, panty raids, rip off your clothes and run through the stadium — real social significance."

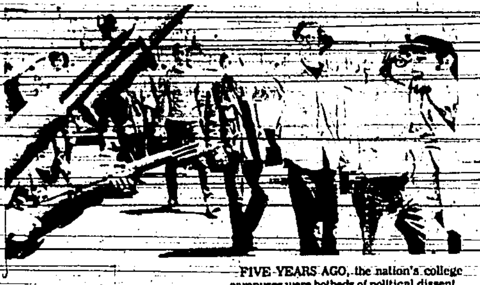
Mike Gold, 26, served as student president at the University of Maryland in the tumultuous 1969-70 period, taught high school briefly and returned to college. Gold says the revolutionary consciousness of the 60s and early 70s "just didn't filter down to the high schools."

"I had kids in high school who are now (college) juniors and they didn't care about anything serious, and it carried over," he said. "They were into drugs and dress code changes and value changes and it gave them an excuse to goof off. We were very serious about what we did."

Gold said there will be no resurgence of student activisism without new leadership — and even that won't guarantee renewed political activity.

Oregon State University President Robert MacIvar agrees that new student activism is unlikely on campus — because the type of student has changed.

"In the past, people did not really want to be here, but were here solely to evade national service," MacIvar said. "They had a deep and abiding concern about the nation's military policy.



Radical memory

FIVE YEARS AGO, the nation's college campuses were hotbeds of political dissent. Today, student radicals have dropped into obscurity and only the clomp-clomp of an occasional sneaker-clad streaker disturbs the Halls of Academia. Gone are scenes such as this, in Berkeley, Ca., as students taunt armed National Guardsmen in May, 1969.

Few care about former POW's

United Press International

When the prisoners of war came back from Vietnam two years ago, they received a tumultuous welcome. Cheering crowds greeted them at airports. Reporters mobbed them. In their home towns, there were parades and parties.

Now, life for many of the exPOWs is calm... even humdrum by comparison. They go to school, hunt for jobs and worry about money.

Few Americans seem to care what has happened to them.

"I'm no different than anybody else now," said Lt. Col. Kenneth Hughey, who was held in a North Vietnamese prison for more than five years. "I've blended in with everybody else."

Hughey, 43, is still in the Air Force and is a graduate student at California State University in Long Beach. In his opinion, Americans haven't forgotten about the POWs. But, he said, "they are more concerned with their own pressing personal problems, like the economy."

Col. Jay Hess, Clearfield, Utah, also was held by the North Vietnamese for more than five years. Like Hughey, he stayed with the Air Force, and now teaches high school ROTC courses.

"Other than the inflation which eats into my salary, I'm having no problems," he said.

Hess said he was not surprised by the apparent lack of interest Americans have shown recently in the fate of the returned prisoners of war. "It's only natural," he said.

Some of the former POWs, like Lt. Col. Floyd Thompson, deputy director of the Department of Army Training Support office at Ft. Benning, Ga., are still having trouble adjusting to life in the United States.

"I'm still working at it," said Thompson, 41, who spent more time in Communist prisons — nearly nine years — than any other American. "I'm doing a lot of living."

That includes taking private flying lessons, going to parties, counseling children of military dependents and writing a book.

Richard Burgess of Yakima, Wash., is having an even rougher time fitting in. When he returned to the United States after spending six years in a prison camp, he received several thousand dollars in back pay — and promptly spent most of it.

Now, he can't find a job and he's seeing a psychiatrist. "I haven't been able to adjust to society," he said. "It is very difficult for me."

Mark Gartley also had employment problems when he returned to this country after four years in a North Vietnamese camp.

In 1973, Eastern Airlines hired him as a flight engineer. Less than a year later, he was laid off. He then ran for Congress as a Democrat against Rep. William Cohen, R-Maine, and was overwhelmingly defeated.

His luck finally changed, however. In January, the Maine state legislature elected him secretary of state.

Now, he would like to see the mood of the nation change.

"It sounds a little corny," Gartley, 30, said. "But you look at the country and see people are downhearted and I think everyone should make an effort to get it together."

Lt. Col. Robert Jeffrey is also doing well. The Air Force is paying his way through Southern Methodist University, where he hopes to earn a master's degree in business administration. Meanwhile, he's earning good money and recently installed a swimming pool in his back yard.

"We're doing very well," said his wife, Joy. "I think the returned POWs would be the last ones in the country to be upset about the recession. These men lived without anything. They're going to sit back and be grateful because they've at least got their freedom."

He is vet to odd pets

DETROIT (UPI) — Dr. Robert Stone is not your run-of-the-mill veterinarian.

On a typical day at the Canterbury Clinic, he may find himself treating a macaw with sinus trouble, climbing a stepladder to stare into the eyes of an ailing giraffe, or coping with a balding tarantula.

Complete with operating room, x-ray room and pharmacy, the clinic is one of two he operates in the Detroit area. Although most of his patients are of the dog-and-cat variety, he has become widely known for his treatment of more exotic animals.

Such a practice calls for a lot of improvisation.

He has built a "squeeze box" to keep monkeys still when he gives them shots, uses paper clips to examine the mouths of sick birds and rings the necks of tiny patients with playing cards or plastic bottle tops to keep them from pecking at their stitches.

Once, when nothing else worked, he used acupuncture on a quarterhorse to clear up a bad leg.

"You have to use some ingenuity, for that makes it more interesting," he said.

When his patients are too big for the clinic, he treats them in the parking lot. On one occasion, he had to mount a stepladder to examine a giraffe with a sore eye.

Another time, he converted a van into a makeshift operating room to treat an elephant with a gangrenous tail.

His practice is not without its hazards, such as the time he examined a cantankerous rhinoceros.

The animal hadn't made a sound for several moments inside its trailer truck, but as the veterinarian prepared to open the door it charged, leaving a six-inch dent in the door.

Suspense stars

GUEST STARS Richard Evans and Andrea Marcovicci portray a couple full of intrigue in a two-part episode of "Mannix" entitled "Bird of Prey," to be broadcast Sundays, March 2 and March 9 on the CBS Television Network.

Ballet evokes Russian mood

"Camera Three" presents excerpts from the ballet "Time Passed Summer," danced by The Pennsylvania Ballet, Sunday, March 9 on the CBS Television Network.

"Time Passed Summer" evokes a turn-of-the-century mood inspired by the golden era of Russia's music and literature.

The music, sung in Russian, is a montage of songs by Tchaikovsky.

There are also excerpts from such Russian literature of the period as "Anna Karenina," "Eugene Onegin" and a story by Chekhov, presented as a synthesis of sounds which summon up a time and place long since past but still alive in the memory.

The story tells of gentlefolk listening to a concert on a summer evening. In the minds of five of the women memories call forth private emotions which take shape in dance.

"Time Passed Summer" was choreographed for The Pennsylvania Ballet, one of the new major dance ensembles in this country, by the company's artistic director Benjamin Harkarvy.

The ballet is dedicated to the memory of opera singer Jennie Tourel, whose rendition of these songs stirred Harkarvy to choreograph the dances.

Seventeen dancers, all members of the Pennsylvania Ballet, participate in the performance. Barbara Weissberger is the executive artistic director of the company.

Merrill Brockway produced and directed this "Camera Three" broadcast for WCBS-TV, CBS owned television station in New York.

Actress flunks drama

Ruth Gordon, a petite, vibrant actress, has been taking life by the horns for a long time now, "about a hundred years, to quote her husband," writer director Garson Kanin.

Not quite, but she shows no signs of slackening her pace.

Appropriately, she began her stage career playing in "Peter Pan." Much later, she switched from pixies to poltergeists, for her role as the devilish neighbor in the film "Rosemary's Baby."

When she accepted her Oscar for that performance, Miss Gordon announced "I can't tell you how encouraging anything like this is."

Now in yet another spirited performance, she appears for the first time in a television series as guest star of the "Kojak" episode "I Want to Report a Dream ..." on the CBS Television Network.

"I suspect it's one of the best acting jobs I've ever done," she says, even though Miss Gordon has a lengthy career of accomplishments to look back upon for comparison. "They were the best people and the script was exciting."

Miss Gordon started her acting career by flunking out of drama school. Nonetheless, she has gone on defying expectations ever since. She arrived in New York City from New England, much against her father's protests, and lived on nickels and dimes for a while.

Within four years she had made her way to Broadway success.

"Nothing is impossible," she contends, reflecting back on her life. "I've been an actress so long I can imagine myself at anything."

Although she doesn't reject any possibilities, Miss Gordon admits that she is not a psychic believer. But she didn't find her disbelief a handicap to her acting on "Kojak," in which she portrays a woman who envisions a murder and fears her dream will turn to reality.

"When you're an actress you can get into anything," she says. "You don't have to commit a murder to play a murderess before the cameras. I think you can learn to play anything."

Celtics game Sunday

The defending champion Boston Celtics host the Golden State Warriors in National Basketball Association action to be broadcast on the CBS Television Network Sunday, March 9.

Brent Musburger, play-by-play, and Oscar Robertson, analyst, cover the action from Boston Garden.

Boston's invincible Celtics, after celebrating the New Year by returning to their accustomed first place in the Atlantic Division, have [illegible] the NBA's longest winning streak (11) of the season and have won 23 of the last 27 games played.

They have more depth than any team, and trying to dethrone them won't be easy.

Golden State has played above par this season. However, they've lost 18 of their last 33 games.

Tense moment

POLICEWOMAN Patty Butler, played by Susan Blakely, shows she learned her lessons well as she protects herself against a junkie in "Report to the Commissioner," a new police movie.

Back to brothers

PAT PAULSEN, who became nationally known for his comedy as a regular on the old Smothers brothers program, has been signed as a regular on NBC-TV's new "Smothers Brothers Show," Mondays starting on the March 3 program.

Producer seeks cop's advice

You're a producer and you're about to film a movie that is a real-life odyssey into the haunts and characters of the New York City underworld.

You're shooting it from the point of view of two young undercover cops who are assigned to Manhattan's Times Square area. One is a pretty, young woman, assigned to the narcotics detail and the other is the son of a veteran of the force who is assigned a partner and together work the streets.

A case of mistaken identity erupts into a nightmare of murder and cover-ups, which breaks into one of the biggest scandals the city has ever seen.

You want it tough and you want it real

So what do you do?

You seek the advice of an expert.

That is exactly what Mike Frankovich, producer of "Report to the Commissioner" did. Filming on location in New York City, Frankovich sought and received the full cooperation of the New York City Police Department, along with the assistance of a resident squad of technical experts.

Among these experts was New York detective Sonny Grosso who, along with his partner Eddie Egan, made the historic "French Connection" bust which led to the uncovering of over $32,000,000 worth of heroin.

Having previously worked as technical advisor on such hits as "The French Connection," "The Godfather," and "Kojak," Grosso's film experience as well as his 20 years on the force made him a logical choice to work on "Report to the Commissioner."

Present for each days shooting, Grosso was available for the various activities that the film required. His overall responsibilities were to teach stars Michael Moriarty, Susan Blakely and Yaphet Kotto the tricks of the plainclothes trade and the fine art of undercover work.

This included teaching Ms. Blakely how to properly fire a .38 policemen's special and teaching Yaphet Kotto the ropes on a real patrol in the 22nd precinct.

Producer Frankovich was so impressed with Grosso's talents, that he wound up casting him in the film playing — what else — a New York City Detective.

"Report to the Commissioner," a Frankovich Production, stars Michael Moriarty, Yaphet Kotto, Susan Blakely, Hector Elizondo as D'Angelo and Tony King. Produced by M.J. Frankovich, the film was directed by Milton Katselas from a screenplay by Abby Mann and Ernest Tidyman from the best-selling novel by James Mills.

Musical score composed by Elmer Bernstein, "Report to the Commissioner" is released by United Artists, an entertainment service of Transamerica Corporation.

Baked trash helps soil

By GEORGE ABRAHAM

WHEN TO PLANT: Home gardeners have a difficult time knowing when to sow seeds indoors for outdoor planting and quite often they aren't sure just when it's safe to plant outdoors.

For years, farmers and gardeners have timed their activities by the annual budding, flowering and fruiting of outdoor plants.

The relationship between climate and periodical things such as the first flowers, or the yearly migration of birds, is the science of phenology. The word comes from the Greek "phaino," meaning to show or appear.

Early farmers knew that the "time to plant corn is when newly unfolding elm or oak leaves are the size of a squirrel's ear."

Timing of specific agricultural activities such as planting, spraying and harvesting can sometimes be related to phenological events.

Green Thumb

For example, Montana farmers found that if they harvest alfalfa within 10 days of lilac bloom, the overwintering brood of alfalfa weevil is eliminated before it can hatch.

And in some areas such as Long Island, growers are alerted to watch for the arrival of cabbage maggot adults when forsythia bushes are in bloom.

Phenology is not new but it is getting much attention these days. Observance on indicator plants can be used to forecast the date of occurrence of such things as plant disease, flights of insects and birds.

Most of the US and Canada are cooperating on a "lilac" phenology project, using the lilac as the indicator plant. Where lilac is not well adapted, two types of honeysuckle are used.

An earth-orbiting satellite is being used to chart the progress of spring as it moves from south to north. Perhaps home gardeners and farmers will be able to do as the Roman farmers used to — go by phenological calendars rather than by guess work.

BUILD A HOT BED! If you're handy with a hammer and the saw and have some scrap boards kicking around, build yourself a hotbed. It's nothing more than a wooden box with a sloping roof made of glass or windows. The size can be any dimension, depending on what scraps you have.

You can heat it with cow manure, horse manure or electric cable, or light bulbs. Dig down about a foot to bury the manure, which serves as a source of heat. If you use a cable, bury it in an inch or so of sand, then place 3 or 4 inches of soil on top.

FREE: Send me a self-addressed, stamped envelope for a free copy of my bulletin, HOW TO MAKE HOTBEDS AND COLDFRAMES. You can use them for starting your own tomatoes, peppers, plus a wide range of flowering plants.

WOOD ASHES: The energy crisis has caused the fireplace to be something besides ornamental.

What about the wood ashes it's producing? They are useful for the garden. Wood ashes, unleached, contain all the mineral elements found in the marginal wood. The most abundant elements are lime and potash.

Potash is what gives plants stiff stems and imparts increased vigor and disease resistance. Ashes also contain phosphorus, the nutrient that stimulates growth and root formation. Twigs are richer in nutrients than mature wood.

Wood ashes can be used on the compost pile with leaves, etc., to hasten decomposition. Since wood ashes contain lime, don't use on soils for potatoes, unless you test the soil for acidity (it's a simple test).

Also keep wood ashes away from "acid-loving" plants such as azaleas and rhododendrons. Home gardeners who do not have wood ashes can use lime to get the same effect as wood ashes.

NOTE: If you add ashes year after year the soil should be tested to make sure it's not overly sweet or so saturated with ashes as to cause drying out of the soil.

PONDEROSA LEMONS: Few things are prettier than an indoor lemon tree loaded with giant-size lemons. One thing to watch out for with any citrus — do not overwater. If in a crock it's easy to overwater because of poor air circulation. This causes the leaves to drop. Syringe the foliage to keep off dust and insects.

BAKE YOUR GARBAGE: The fertilizer shortage has driven home one good point: garbage makes a good fertilizer and soil conditioner.

A reader writes: "At home I have a gas oven with a pilot light, so I put my garbage (peelings, orange skins, etc.) in the oven for a few days to dehydrate it. It dries better if put on a newspaper or a porous layer and the only heat is from the pilot light.

"As it dries, I put it in a large garbage can. If I bake in the oven, after I've finished I put fresh garbage in while the oven is still warm and it dries faster. By the time spring gets here I have a can of dehydrated garbage. There's no smell from this.

"In fact, in the can during the winter, I can smell the aroma of orange skins. I put the dried product in with leaves, grass clippings and spade it into the soil. The compost is good for any soil and should never go to the dump."

Great idea! We're never going to lick inflation until we start to conserve, preserve and recycle at all levels.

QUESTION BOX

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: D. F. of Twin Falls: "Recently you confused us by saying that the long, snake-like growths of Boston ferns should be yanked out. We find that where they touch the soil, they grow new plantlets. Why shouldn't these be left on?"

We referred to the long, string-like growths found on Boston ferns. Actually, there's need for keeping these on the plants and we've always advocated pulling them out since they never produce leaves.

It is true that at the base of these "shoe-strings" or wherever they touch, they will grow new plantlets, but beyond that they are practically worthless.

Some gardeners knock the plant out of the pot, and then take the stringy shoots and wind them around the ball of soil. This serves an another "root" and absorbs moisture and nutrients from the soil.

So there are three things you can do with these leafless shoots: Take them off, leave them on, or wrap each around the ball of soil. We still prefer to remove them from the plant.

C. D., of Rockland: "We want to plant some squash again this year, but don't want them to wilt like they did last summer. Is there anything that can be done to prevent the vines from wilting?"

What you had was the squash vine borer, a pest that hollows out the stem, causing the vine to wilt. Sometimes if you detect wilting soon enough you can stab the borer with a knife. Most of the problem takes place at the base of the plant close to the root.

In early summer, about the time the squash vine begins to crawl, a wasp-like moth lays eggs singly on the stems and leaf stalks close to the base. The borer overwinters in a dirt-covered, silk-lined, black cocoon, a couple inches below the soil surface as a larva or pupa.

Spraying or dusting with methoxychlor will prevent wilting. Note: Butternut and the acorn squash are not troubled by this pest. Summer squash such as the green skinned zucchini or the yellow skinned types can be protected from borers by a dusting of Sevin.

Pick fruit of summer squash, when small, say 4 or 5 inches long. Keep picked frequently for tenderest quality all summer long.

If space is limited grow the bush squash as they take up less space.

Country vicar makes history

BY REV. LESTER KINSOLVING

ROYDON, ESSEX, ENGLAND — Rev. Christopher Wansey, 64, is an exceptionally energetic, engaging and elfin rebel, who has made history in the Church of England.

This is altogether appropriate for this vicar of St. Peter's Anglican (Episcopal) Parish in this exquisitely picturesque village. For St. Peter's was built by Earl Fitzwater — in 1215 A.D. — after he had led the Barons to Runnymede, where King John was forced to sign the Magna Carta.

Inside Religion

Another parishioner of St. Peter's was Sir Thomas More, attorney, saint and chancellor of England who was martyred for standing against Henry VIII. Still another interesting parishioner was Thomas Colte, whose descendants in the US dropped the "e" and produced the famed .45 pistol.

Rev. Mr. Wansey has had a similarly explosive effect on the Church (and state) of England.

"I've always fought against the state appointment of our bishops," he remarked during an interview. "This might have been acceptable when all members of Parliament had to be confirmed members of the Church of England — and when the 300 Clergy Proctors in Convocation were still taking their appointed seats in the House of Commons."

Then, a gleam appeared in the eyes of this dynamic priest: "Since I am one of these 300 Clergy Proctors, I announced that I intended to take my seat in Commons. But when I arrived to do so, someone had installed a solid line of policemen to block my entrance, so I simply told the television people: 'I've been resisted!' — and then I went home."

Parliament subsequently voted to permit the Church of England to elect its own bishops.

Vicar Wansey's charm is sufficiently irresistible for him to have survived, even though he has (1) Rearranged the pews (to church-in-the-round style) in this 700 year-old church, (2) Politely refused to baptize any infants ("I know little girls who have said: 'Mummy, why didn't you let me make this decision for myself?'").

But perhaps Wansey's most memorable effect came last year when the Church of England, by a large majority, voted in favor of Wansey's motion to "chop off a thousand pounds from our annual support of the World Council of Churches."

"I'm not against either the ecumenical movement or helping the downtrodden," he explained, "But the World Council of Churches has been financially supporting African guerrilla groups who murder and rape civilians and who destroy hospitals, among other shocking things."

Rev. Mr. Wansey went on to note:

"I didn't do any campaigning. The idea for this cut in money to the World Council of Churches came while I was on my way to York. This is the first time in 24 years I have ever seen the budget amended from the floor."

"I'm not a pacifist. But it is certainly time to stand for Christian principles when church offerings are being used to finance terrorists. You don't do the Lord's work with the devil's weapons."

"My proposal for a reduction in funds to the World Council of Churches was followed by a comparison of these African terrorists to the Irish Republican Army — which, of course, hit home."

Cats have twins too

Merry Pet

BY LINDA MERRY, DVM

Question: I have always wanted to tame a bobcat. One of my friends has one, a male, but no female. Would it be possible to breed him to a house cat so I could get a kitten? How wild do you expect it would be.

Answer: I'd expect it to be a wild, wild affair since it's never been done before. Many people have tried crossing the domestic and bobcat. So far they've all been double-crossed ... no babies.

Taxonomists are people who name things, especially animals and plants. Species of animals are named because of genetic (or breeding) isolation. When the taxonomists hit the bobcat they named him Lynx rufus. The domestic cat was called Felis domestics. The two don't mix unless the taxonomists are mixed up.

So far, the name callers have been on safe territory!

Question: Our old momma cat had, this last litter, two little speckled cats that look just alike. I think they're identical twins but my husband doesn't agree. He says cats can't have twins. Is there some way we can tell, for sure?

Answer: Cats can have "identical" twins. In fact, animals that bear litters are a little more likely to have twins than those who normally have only one infant (like humans).

In man about 0.3 per cent of all births are identical twins, in cattle it's about 12 per cent but in mice it jumps to 0.7 per cent.

There's no reliable data for cats but no reason to doubt that twins do appear every so often. As in other animals, identical twinning is due to splitting of a fertilized egg.

There are several ways to tell if the sisters are twins, but most aren't "practical" for settling an argument. Serologic methods are available and highly accurate but also expensive.

Maybe the easiest method — (and pretty accurate (for animals)) is comparing spots. Identical cats will be the spittin' mirror image of each other. That is, if Sister one has a black right ear, Sister two will have a balck left ear just like it. If one has a white right paw, the other's left paw will match it, and so on.

But, don't fight over a few hair's difference since minor variations do occur. The tendency toward twinning is inherited in most species.

Question: I was watching my cat the other day and noticed this weird thing -- eyes jerk back and forth so fast you'd hardly notice. She's a Siamese about 1 year old. She's always been her eyes jerk back and forth so fast you'd hardly notice. She's a Siamese about 1 year old. She's always been healthy, and seems to see just fine. Is this something I should worry about -- because I am? If so, what can be done for her?

Answer: This fluttering (nystagmust) of the eyes in Siamese cats isn't unusual. It probably comes from a dimness of vision and the cat's attempt to fix its vision. There is some evidence that the condition is hereditary and this seems to be the only breed of cat in which it's seen. These cat's don't appear to be inconvenienced by it and there's no known treatment for the lesion.

If you have a question about your pet, send it to The Merry Pet in care of the Times-News.

Show premieres

PAUL SORVINO and Mitzi Hoag star as a middle-class New Jersey couple, in the new comedy drama series, "We'll Get By," which premieres Friday on the CBS Television Network. The series was created by Alan Alda, star of the Network's M-A-S-H."

Tennis tiger dares rival

Jimmy Connors, the young tiger of tennis who is ranked No. 1, takes on the only top player he has never defeated, the hard-hitting John Newcombe of Australia, in a three-of-five set match at Caesar's Palace, Las Vegas, Saturday, April 26.

The match will be broadcast live on the CBS Television Network, in a special addition of the "CBS Sports Spectacular."

"This match is a natural follow-up to the Jimmy Connors-Rod Laver match broadcast on CBS earlier this month. According to their records over the past two years, these are the two greatest men players in the world today, and we are expecting a super match," Robert Wussler, Vice President, Sports, CBS Television Network, stated.

The announcement was made at the CBS Broadcast Center in New York City with Connors present and Newcombe on camera live from Auckland, New Zealand, via satellite.

This was the first live telecast to the United States from New Zealand.

In January, Newcombe defeated Connors in the finals of the Australian Open, 7-5, 3-6, 6-4, 7-6. Previously, Newcombe defeated him in July, 1974, in a World Team Tennis one-set match decided by a tie-breaker.

Their only other match was in the quarter-finals of the 1973 U.S. Open at Forest Hills when Newcombe won, 6-4, 7-6, 7-6.

Last year the 30-year-old Newcombe won 14 tournaments. He is currently playing on the Australian Davis Cup Team in the Eastern Zone finals against New Zealand.

Connors, in addition to defeating Laver in their February 2 Challenge Cup Match at Caesar's Palace in four sets, has won four tournaments in 1975.

Last year he swept the Australian Open, Wimbledon and the U.S. Open while winning 14 tournaments and nearly $300,000 in prize money to earn his No. 1 ranking.

The 12-point tie-breaker will be used in this five-set match.

Teacher turned actor sparks comedy show

George Lindsey is a popular entertainer who in 15 years has gone from being a high school teacher to an actor to a financier.

George is featured every week on Yongestreet's "Hee Haw" series, seen on more than 200 television stations.

"I do everything on 'Hee Haw' but sweep out the studio," George says. "I enjoy the comedy, sing a number now and then, and work in some of the skits. I also write some of my numbers, including 'Goober and the City Slicker.'"

"And, last but certainly not least, I'm the only fella on the show who wears a tie."

George is best known for his portrayal of "Goober" on the Mayberry RFD" and "The Andy Griffith Show" in 1963 and continued when "Mayberry" succeeded the series.

He has co-starred in three motion pictures: "Ensign Pulver" for Warner Brothers, and "Snowball Express" and "Charley and the Angel" for Walt Disney Productions. He also is a featured voice in the animated features, "The Aristocrats," and "Robin Hood."

He is a frequent guest on talk shows, matching wits with Johnny Carson, Merv Griffin and Mike Douglas.

George has guest-starred on more than 50 television series and specials, including the "Orange Blossom Special" last year.

A native of Jasper, Alabama, Lindsey attended Florence State University on a football scholarship. Following graduation from college, Lindsey spent three years in the Air Force, during which time he played in over 300 service shows. His talents as an entertainer were recognized when he was named runner up in the worldwide Air Force Talent Contest.

Lindsey later joined the faculty of Hazel Green High School in Huntsville, Alabama, where he taught History and coached Basketball and Baseball.

After teaching for one year, Lindsey decided to follow up on earlier interest in theatrical arts, and moved to New York to complete a two-year course in Dramatics at the American Theatre Wing. During this time, he developed a distinctive comedy routine and appeared at nightclubs and hotels throughout New York and the Catskill Mountains.

Nor is Lindsey's ability to entertain limited to acting. He has recorded several hit records and albums, including the best selling, "Ninety-six Miles to Bakersfield," "Jesus Jones," "Remember Back When," and his latest for Bryan Records, "I Like Ugly Girls."

In addition to his widespread interests in the entertainment world, Lindsey is involved in numerous business and investment ventures.

Gossip Column

ELVIS
. . . no jets

By ROBIN ADAMS SLOAN

Q: I read that Elvis Presley is buying the Robert Vesco jet plane. Doesn't sound like he is very sick to me. — H.W., Nashville, Tenn.

A: That story got a big play in the press but it has since been denied by Presley followers. The big story is that Elvis, 40 and overweight, may be suffering from a serious liver ailment. We'll report more soonest.

Q: Is Audrey Hepburn pregnant as rumored? — Y.W., Cleveland, Ohio.

A: We're not sure but the man who dressed her for years, designer Hubert Givenchy, says she is. If so, this would seem to put the nix on all those stories that the retired star's marriage to her Roman doctor is on the fritz. They have two children already. One is Audrey's from her marriage to Mel Ferrer.

Q: Suppose you believe that the ills of the body can best be cured by mental concentration and mystic power. What hospital could you go to? — J.S., Roanoke, Va.

AUDREY

A: A new hospital, due to open this summer in England where "fringe" medicine will be practiced, may be the place for you. With such celebrities as ex-Beatle George Harrison and famed violinist Yehudi Menuhin donating money and promising patronage, the hospital will offer faith healing, homeopathy and acupuncture on a regular basis under the direction of Dr. Chandra Sharma. Just in case, the institute staff will also be trained in orthodox medicine.

ROCK QUICKIES: David Bowie and Mick Jagger misbehaved over a check at New York's Cafe Carlyle and were asked by the management to leave . . . Bette Midler's indecisions regarding her career resulted in a loused-up last recording session. It may all have to be done over . . . One of the original Supremes, Florence Ballard, is using Motown while living on welfare in Detroit . . . Cherry Vanilla, the new underground sensation who dresses like a tart and recites poetry in nightclubs, says David Bowie's bisexual "image" was all just that — image. Cherry thinks David's quite a little man.

HEMINGWAY
. . . like father, like son

Q: Could you tell a couple of teenage girls whether Caroline Kennedy is popular with the boys or not? — K. McV., Rochester, N.Y.

A: She seems to be. As a matter of fact, Caroline's photograph is the only girl's picture in the 1975 year book of Manhattan's Collegiate School. Caroline's brother John goes there, as well as her cousin Steve Smith.

DONKEY IN THE DOG HOUSE: The Democrats' National Chairman, Robert Strauss, is the new target of the Gay Activists. Since it was printed that a typically friendly social greeting by Texas Strauss is, "Well, if this isn't the biggest collection of fags I've ever seen in my life!" Strauss has been bombarded with an avalanche of protests for putting down gays and demands that the Democrat Party make gays active in politics.

Q: Is the woman who married King Carol II of Romania still living? What was her name? Didn't she take him for a bundle? — K.E., Newport, R.I.

A: Magda Lupescu, the beauty who was married to the exiled king in Mexico shortly before he died, lives a cloistered life in Estoril, Portugal, and has refused six figures for the story of her life. Most people think Magda cleaned up in her years as "royal mistress" but there are others who say the weak-willed king took very little money with him and Magda supported him to the end on the sales from her jewels.

QUESTION YOU HAVE ASKED HUNDREDS OF TIMES: Was President Kennedy shot from the rear as the Warren Commission claims or from the front as the assassination buffs insist? A new print of the famed Abraham Zapruder home-movie, owned by Time, Inc., has been obtained by young film-maker Robert Groden. He has worked it over with sharper quality and optics to zoom in on JFK during the critical six seconds when the bullets struck the late President. The result seems to disprove the Warren Commission findings.

Q: I have seen Margaret Leighton in two films lately where she is only shown sitting down. Is something wrong with her, as rumored? — H.W., New York, N.Y.

ELLEN
. . . tough talk

A: The fine British actress is suffering from multiple sclerosis and has some difficulty getting about. But medication is arresting the disease and Margaret (Mrs. Michael Wilding in private life) is still mobile.

QUESTION YOU NEVER ASKED: Are Earl Blackwell, the creator of "Celebrity Service," and syndicated fashion columnist Eugenia Sheppard going to tie the knot in the spring as several people have suggested? The answer is no. They are just very good friends and like to go everywhere together — except down the aisle.

Q: It seems to me that every picture you ever see of Mrs. Henry Kissinger, she's holding a cigarette. — G.L., Lowell, Mass.

MAGDA
. . . cloistered

A: Nancy Kissinger is never without a cigarette and at the State Department she's notorious for flicking ashes on the valuable antique rugs.

Q: Just what kind of stuff will Mrs. John Dean get in her book and who needs it? What does she know anyway? — H.N., Boston, Mass.

A: "Mo" Dean says her book, to be published in May, will be "primarily a love story." Those who've seen early drafts say it's full of details about "Mo's" experiences with the roving-eyed leaders of governments. Of former Ambassador to Britain Walter Annenberg, Mrs. Dean recalls, "He likes to dance unusually close to his partners." Now some V.I.P.'s wonder what else she remembers? "Mo" says, "I hope I can impart some knowledge to young wives — all wives — about men of power and how to handle the situation and not get lost in the shuffle."

QUESTION YOU NEVER ASKED: If France's President isn't involved with actress Catherine Deneuve, then who is he hung up on? The Jet Set claims it is the beautiful Princess Domietta Hercolani whom Valery Giscard d'Estaing goes out to see at night. And then there's that other fixture of the French nobility, a lady whose family goes back to the 12th century. She lives very near France's leader Numero Uno.

Q: Is it true that Ernest Hemingway's father also committed suicide by shooting himself? — G.G., Memphis, Tenn.

A: Yes, when he was ill and in financial trouble. Probably the strangest aspect of that suicide was Ernest, telling his sister Sunny, at the time, "I'll probably go the same way."

Q: Like everyone else I'm fascinated with Ellen Burstyn, who was in "The Last Picture Show" and "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore." But I can't seem to find out any personal details about her. How come? — K.L., Manchester, N.H.

A: The actress is becoming known as the "toughest interview in town." Ms. Burstyn's press agents have a lengthy list of questions that she absolutely will not answer including anything about her former husbands (three of them), her age (42), her children (one son, 13).

PARIS PAPARAZZI: Princess Caroline of Monaco is the latest victim of long-lens spying. The 18-year-old daughter of Princess Grace and Prince Rainier was photographed for the weekly "Minute" clad only in her bra while doing sitting-up exercises at the family's Avenue Foch apartment.

Q: Would you explain how the Rosen sextuplets are cared for? Does their mother handle it alone? Has she other kids? — H.W., Cleveland, Ohio.

A: The six little Rosens (three boys and three girls) were a year old Jan. 11. They are cared for by their British-born, 25-year-old mother and three nurses. Father Colin is a traveling salesman. The Rosens have two other children, Samantha, 8, and Anthony, 6. The family lives in Cape Town, South Africa.

WOMEN'S LIB: So who says women aren't forging ahead in films? The sister of the Shah of Iran, Princess Ashraf, has had the entire Iranian cinema industry turned over into her pretty little hands. Long a movie buff, now the Princess will produce and provide financing for movies to be made in Iran and out. Those petrodollars should make big box office!
